By Deb Gray and Dick Holman
Star Staff Writers

Legislators this session might be debating how to deal with a native Nebraska plant — marijuana.

Two bills have been introduced which include sections that would change the penalty for those arrested with less than an ounce of marijuana.

The bills look at marijuana possession from opposite poles. One, introduced by Sen. John DeCamp of Neligh, would lessen the penalties but not decriminalize them. The other, sponsored by Sen. Patrick Venditte of Omaha, would stiffen penalties.

And, adding fodder to the fire, Sen. Loran Schmit of Bellwood, who blames lenient courts for rising drug abuse, said he favors a flat sentencing bill. The bill would require judges to levy the law's penalties without compromise.

Schmit said too many drug offenders get off easy. More than 90% of those arrested for marijuana possession in Lancaster County last year received probation.

Present Nebraska law doesn't distinguish between those possessing a small amount of marijuana and those who have much larger amounts. Anyone who possesses a pound or less of marijuana is subject to a maximum $500 fine or up to a seven-day jail sentence, or both.

Critics of the present law say it is selectively enforced, that the penalties give criminal records to people who are not a threat to society and that it creates contempt for the law since so many violate it.

A matter of amount

DeCamp's bill distinguishes between those who possess an ounce (1/16 of a pound) and those who are arrested with more than an ounce but less than a pound. He also proposes that the less-than-one-ounce offenders not be jailed after arrest, but be given a written summons to appear in court within five days. Offenders would be subject to a maximum $100 fine.

Those possessing more than an ounce and less than a pound would be subject to a maximum $500 fine or up to seven days in jail, or both.

For several months, the Lincoln Police Department and the Lancaster County Sheriff's Department have used one of DeCamp's proposals — issuing citations for misdemeanor marijuana possession.

A narcotics agent in the sheriff's department said a citation saves the red tape of jailing an offender — most were released a few hours after arrest anyway, pending court action.

Venditte said he believes imposing lighter penalties amounts to coddling criminals. If his bill passes, anyone possessing a pound or less of marijuana would be subject to a maximum $1,000 fine or up to 30 days in jail, or both.

There is reason to re-examine marijuana legislation. Although Nebraska marijuana arrests have dropped from 3,723 in 1974 to 3,315 in 1975, its use apparently has not.

About 60% of Omaha high school students have smoked marijuana, according to a study released last November by drug education specialist Al Vandenberg. The Judiciary Committee heard testimony this summer from Bellevue Police Chief Warren Robinson that drug-related crimes had tripled in Bellevue during the last five years.

Arrests don't touch suppliers

Although he opposes marijuana use, Sen. Ernest Chambers of Omaha said that stricter penalties encourage law enforcement agencies to focus time and money on the "young people and the dumb people" since they are easiest to catch. The number of arrests looks good statistically, he said, but they don't touch the big suppliers.

Law enforcement officers say they now focus on dealers, but most of their drug arrests are still for marijuana possession. Out of the 4,142 Nebraska drug arrests in 1975, 3,315 were for marijuana possession.

But, before any change comes in the marijuana laws, the Legislature must consider some fundamental questions. First, is marijuana really dangerous?

Venditte said he will present findings from recent scientific studies that say it is. These studies claim prolonged marijuana use damages cells, the reproductive system and lung tissues and that it creates pathological forms of thinking resembling paranoia.

Organizations which lobby for marijuana reform — such as Help End Marijuana Prohibition (HEMP) and the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML) say these studies are bunk. They have studies of their own which they say refute research critical of marijuana.

Another question, which has been voiced by Sen. Roland Luedtke of Lincoln, asks if any marijuana laws can be enforced.

Imprisonment best deterrent

Venditte said he knows of no better deterrent than imprisonment. "If I knew of one, I would introduce it."

But Luedtke said not only could taxpayers not afford the cost of enforcing a strict marijuana law, but the additional officers required would almost create a police state.

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln said strict enforcement of marijuana laws could cripple society. Since marijuana use crosses age lines, he said if everyone who smoked it were jailed, school enrollment and the work force would dwindle dramatically.

And, out of 10 persons interviewed who admitted partaking of the forbidden weed, none said a stricter penalty would change the amount they smoked.

But the debate is also one of constitutional rights — how far can the government intrude into private lives to protect society?

Barb Gaither of the Nebraska Civil Liberties Union, which has long favored marijuana decriminalization, said stiff penalties endanger a person's constitutional right to privacy.

But Venditte claims that marijuana smoking is not something confined to one's home. Because "it leads to decisional systems of thinking and a need to seduce and proselytize others," he said it affects the fiber of society.

If the Judiciary Committee send both DeCamp's and Venditte's bill to the Unicameral floor for discussion, Luedtke said the resulting debate could be hot.

What could happen is anyone's guess. Some senators have said that DeCamp's bill is the most realistic approach to marijuana. But other legislative observers say they have sensed a tougher attitude toward marijuana. And some observers say the debate could end in stalemate, leaving the law as it is.

Fuel frugality favored

(c) New York Times

Washington — President Carter dramatized his concern about the current weather and fuel crisis with an early morning, 170-mile helicopter ride Sunday to the Pittsburgh area.

He used the occasion to warn the country that it was probably entering a "permanent, very serious energy shortage" that would require a national energy policy built around serious conservation measures.

Conservation "will be the major component" of a "comprehensive, national energy policy" he will send to Congress no later than April 20, the President said.

Carter, dressed in long underwear and a crewneck blue sweater under his grey suit jacket, urged even more spartan reductions in home heating than he had previously asked.

The president flew from the south lawn of the White House at dawn on his first presidential trip, to the Pittsburgh area where he visited and spoke at a Westinghouse plant which makes electrical generating turbines but is threatened with curtailed or interrupted production and worker layoffs by the combined effects of the brutal winter and fuel scarcity.

He returned to the White House at midday and conferred with advisers on the wisdom of offering two possible amendments to the Emergency Natural Gas Act of 1977, which he hopes Congress will pass this week.

One would allow him to authorize governors of affected states to allocate among users up to 5% of the gas supplies in their states during the crisis.

The other amendment would permit the President to divert fuel from some industries that are not labor-intensive and in which production could be temporarily reduced or suspended with little adverse impact to "high priority" concerns with large work forces.

However, Carter seemed to imply that he would not press for such potentially controversial amendments if he felt that they would delay passage of the act, which would permit freer movement of gas from areas of abundance to those of shortage.

Carter skipped his almost unvarying practice of attending Sunday School and church Sunday. Instead he used what one of his predecessors, Theodore Roosevelt, called the "bully pulpit" of the presidency to preach a national sermon on the necessity to be prudent and restrained in the use of energy.

The Emergency Natural Gas Act would provide short-term relief, but was of much less importance than discipline and long-range planning for the future, he said.

Carter spoke to about 30 employees of the East Pittsburgh Westinghouse plant, where some 300 workers have already been laid off. The full work force of about 9,000 may be unemployed within three to four weeks if frozen rivers continue to halt barge movements of fuel oil or the natural gas shortage shuts down satellite shops making components.

Speaking extemporaneously and answering questions — much as he did in factories during the primary elections — Carter drew chuckles when he said, "I am wearing heavy long underwear; it's cold inside the White House."

Carter said his wife had "shed some tears" when he turned down the White House thermostats "because she's really cold natured."

Urging compliance with his earlier appeals on home heating, he escalated those appeals. People should wear more warm clothing — including heavy underwear — indoors. Rooms with open fireplaces could be heated only to 50 degrees, or have the heat turned off.

"I hope we all realize that we are in it together," the President said. "It's really important."

Without specifying the areas, he said some "suburbs will completely lose" natural gas service this week and said that "plans must be made" for families to share houses or for those without heat to be accommodated in public facilities such as school buildings.

Perhaps the major emphasis by Carter Sunday was to warn that the present "crisis" was of less importance than a difficult transition from being a nation reckless in using energy to one which would be forced toward greater frugality.

The present situation "is the first strong indication of a permanent, very serious energy shortage," he said both in Pittsburgh and in Washington upon his return. Speaking at the south portico of the White House on his arrival at noon, he said "the (present) crisis might be over in a few days or a couple of weeks, but the energy shortage is going to be with us, is going to get worse instead of better."

Joseph Cochrane is sole survivor of rare blood disease.

Drummer back on beat after baffling disease

Boston (AP) — Professional drummer Joseph Cochrane is back at work at weddings, tapping out the beat for waltzes and polkas. Doctors won a six-year medical battle to keep him alive.

The tall, burly musician at 53 is the sole known survivor of a blood condition thought to have affected only four others in the world.

Beginning in 1971, the Boston native was admitted to Massachusetts General Hospital 17 times when his blood pressure dipped so low it sent his body into shock. His illness baffled researchers for years.

"The only way to live with something like this is to be optimistic," said Cochrane in an interview. "I just kept hoping something would eventually be done for me."

Doctors at Massachusetts General said in this month's issue of MGH News they have pinpointed the cause of the mysterious ailment that left Cochrane bedridden for months at a time. And they said they have a treatment for the sickness.

Dr. Newton E. Hyslop, immunologist in charge of Cochrane's case, said the drummer goes into shock — a condition that often follows crushing injuries or major surgery — when his blood's serum content leaks out of capillaries and into muscle tissue.

Triggered by an unusually high degree of clotting ability, the condition causes vessels to collapse and blood pressure to fall, they said. Circulation is cut off to vital organs, a prelude to death.

Hyslop prescribed an oral blood thinner for Cochrane in August 1975 that has returned the patient's clotting level to normal and almost stopped his attacks. He suffered only two minor episodes in 1976.

Cochrane, who has played with some of the best jazz and Dixieland bands, hardly noticed his first attack. He thought he had a bad virus cold until one day he felt so weak he couldn't get out of bed.

Twinges and aches followed and he soon lost consciousness. His wife, Mary, called an ambulance that rushed him to the hospital.

"One doctor pronounced me dead for eight minutes," said Cochrane, who now stays within an hour of the hospital. "It's just like a feeling of being out of your body, like being in a dark place."

Doctors listed his illness as "pneumonia with complications" but wondered why he had gone into shock so suddenly. A full year went by until Cochrane suffered another attack. Once again he was saved.

Then, six months later, the drummer had his worst episode. His heart stopped 12 times and he went into cardiac and respiratory arrest.

Doctors and nurses took turns applying manual pressure to his chest throughout the night to keep his heart beating.

"One nurse kept beating me until her wrists grew sore," he said. "They broke all the ribs in my thorax trying to keep me alive."

Cochrane, connected to a respirator, hovered between life and death for months while researchers analyzed his blood, looking in vain for tumors, allergies or glandular disorder.

Cold forces layoff of over 1.5 million

Associated Press

More than 1.5 million persons were out of work as a cold wave continued through the weekend, forcing the closing of factories and businesses and a curtailment of natural gas consumption.

At least 45 deaths were blamed on the weather in the East and Midwest.

Ohio reported the highest number of workers sent home when plants closed. The state Department of Community Development said Sunday one million persons, 25% of the state's work force, had been laid off because of the Arctic-like weather.

Weather-related deaths from exposure, fires, heart attacks and carbon monoxide poisoning were reported in 10 states and 16 persons were missing in the ruin of a burned out hotel in Breckinridge, Minn. Workmen were trying to dig through the still smoking rubble.

Temperatures near or below zero combined with winds of 25 to 40 miles an hour along the north Atlantic Coast, the Great Lakes, the upper Mississippi Valley and the northern Plains. Wind-chill factors of 60 below zero or more were common across portions of Minnesota and the Dakotas early in the weekend.

Although temperatures eased upward Sunday into the teens and 20s in the northern parts of the East, little relief from the cold weather was forecast for the rest of the weekend, and unseasonably cold temperatures were expected through Monday.

Freezing rain mixed with snow fell from Texas across the Southeast as afternoon temperatures ranged from highs in the upper 20s to the upper 30s on Sunday.

Effect of Carter's bill on Lincoln unknown

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

The impact of President Carter's emergency natural gas plans on Lincoln remains a question.

Until Carter's proposed legislation before Congress is finished, the effect on Lincoln's gas bills can't be predicted, a gas company official said.

"I could take a guess and say 5 to 10%," said Howard Sorenson, an executive at Northern Natural Gas Co., supplier for Lincoln's Cengas Co.

"But that's loaded with so many variable it's impossible to predict right now."

Carter's request asks three new executive powers.

The first is temporary deregulation of the price of gas purchased by interstate pipelines, allowing suppliers to buy from companies that don't send gas across state lines.

Only interstate gas producers are regulated by the federal government.

A price increase by Cengas would be in accord with the amount of unregulated gas Northern would have to buy to keep up with its contract.

"We only raise prices with the price of gas coming to us," said Cengas regional manager C.L. Wilcox.

The current regulated price is $1.42 per 1,000 cubic feet, almost triple the gas price before a Dec. 27 rate hike, which is tied up in court.

The unregulated gas fluctuates around $2.45 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Northern has been piping about 3% unregulated gas into Cengas since the cold snap. Carter's request would allow that until Aug. 1.

The extension would allow gas companies to replenish supplies which have been drained during the cold wave. Carter's second proposal allows competing gas companies to voluntarily loan gas to each other while limiting service to their own customers.

It also protects the supplier from lawsuits. From angered local companies through April 30.

The third proposal would give the President the power to order companies to loan gas to each other in emergencies. It would have the greatest effect on Nebraska if okayed.

The President could make a gas supplier limit its service to its customers to help a more needy area.

"We hope they won't take gas and endanger our system," Sorenson said.

And Mother Nature has fogged what used to be an uncomplicated situation. In the good old days when the South was warm and the North cold in the winter, the northeastern U.S. would borrow gas from the southern U.S.

That arrangement is void. With a cold South this winter, the Eastern states are begging for help.

"I'm not afraid of us coming up short," Sorenson said. "Most of the gas suppliers have enough to keep their contracts, but no one's got enough to loan."

Currently the markets for spare gas are in the Southwest and California.

"Texas still uses gas to generate electricity," Sorenson said. "Something we haven't done for two years."

Northern supplies gas in seven states, none of which are in emergency areas. It services about six million customers, $5,000 belonging to Cengas.

Oil taken off leaking, icebound barge

Buzzards Bay, Mass. (UPI) — About 3 million gallons of heating oil were pumped from a leaking, icebound barge Sunday while the Coast Guard tried to free two other barges trapped in 3-foot-thick ice at the mouth of the Cape Cod Canal.

The barge Frederick Bouchard No. 65 leaked about 100,000 gallons of No. 2 oil during the weekend after ripping open four of its 10 tanks at the ice-clogged canal entrance Friday night.

The Coast Guard said it would attempt to burn off some of the spillage after working out details with the environmental protection Agency. The attempt could take place as early as Monday, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

The disabled barge was freed later Sunday and towed to Boston where pumping operations were to be completed.

The Coast Guard's Charles Crosby said attempts would be made to burn off substantial pockets of oil in the area of Cleveland Ledge, about four miles from shore, where the barge originally grounded. Another pocket of oil was found near Wings Neck, where the barge was towed after the accident. Crosby said vacuum devices would be used to suck up that oil.

"They're going to try to burn some of the oil off," said Crosby. "Some of the patches are 100 yards long to 50 to 100 yards wide, and some of them were very thick."

"They're working on details now on how they're going to ignite the oil, from the air maybe . . . we're working with the EPA and the state Department of Environmental Affairs about burning it," he said.

Oil is pumped from grounded barge (foreground) to another barge.

Two more barges, one carrying 3 million gallons of homeheating oil, the other 1,600 short tons of coconut oil, became trapped Saturday just south of the canal.

The 100-foot tug Mary Tercamo with its 340-foot oil barge was "immobilized" about four miles southwest of where the first barge was trapped, but was in no danger of sinking, Coast Guard spokesman Mark Bourbeau said Sunday.

The 87-foot tug Ocean King with its 237-foot barge carrying coconut oil, also was locked in ice about one-half mile southwest of the Bouchard.

"There is no immediate danger to either one of them," Bourbeau said.

Crowd turns out for opposition rally

New Delhi, India (AP) — More than 50,000 persons turned out Sunday for the first opposition rally permitted by the government in 19 months of emergency rule as active political campaigning began for the March parliamentary elections.

"I never expected the turnout to be so great," former Deputy Prime Minister Morarji Desai told the rally, which was organized on two days' notice with little publicity. "It shows that the spirit of the people is still alive."

Reports reaching New Delhi said the newly formed Janata (People's) party headed by Desai also held rallies in four other Indian cities — Jaipur, Patna, Kanpur and Bombay — to kick off the campaign against Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's Congress party, which has ruled India since independence in 1947.

The Congress party has not yet formally begun its campaign, although Mrs. Gandhi's controversial son, Sanjay, has been barnstorming the country attacking the Janata party, which was formed last week through the merger of four non-Communist opposition groups.

The rally in New Delhi was considered the most significant because it was held on the same site — the spacious Ram Lila grounds — where the last opposition public meeting took place on June 25, 1975. A few hours afterward, the government proclaimed an emergency, suspended civil liberties, jailed opposition leaders and imposed press censorship.

The 1975 rally, also attended by about 50,000 persons, was dominated by calls by opposition leaders for Mrs. Gandhi to resign following her conviction on charges of corrupt electoral practices in winning her Parliament seat in the 1971 elections.

Sunday's rally was marked by repeated pleas to Indian voters to overcome what Desai described as an atmosphere of fear created during the emergency.

"The people have to come out of this shell of fear or else they will become slaves of the present regime," he said. "Even during the British era we had not witnessed the atmosphere of fear we are witnessing today."

"You have to face this fear with boldness and courage," Desai told the crowd, reminding them of the teachings of independence leader Mohandas Gandhi, who was assassinated 29 years ago to the day.

The 80-year-old Desai, who resigned from the government in 1969 after Mrs. Gandhi fired him as finance minister, was one of the first opposition leaders jailed at the start of the emergency.

He was released Jan. 18, a few hours before Mrs. Gandhi announced the decision to hold parliamentary elections and to permit the resumption of "legitimate" political activity as part of a relaxation of the emergency. Some of the emergency measures remain in effect.

Wearing the traditional white cap of the movement which led to India's independence and wrapped in a shawl to protect himself against the chilly weather, Desai told the crowd to stop cheering him as he was introduced.

"Shouts will not do," he said. "You have to bring victory to the Janata party. Only then you can cheer."

Desai indicated the government's stepped-up family planning program, with emphasis on sterilization, would be an important campaign issue. He pointed toward a nearby slum area where riots broke out last April following accusations that the government was trying to forcibly sterilize persons.

Washington (UPI) — Andrew Young, quoting from the hymn "Amazing Grace," was sworn in Sunday as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations — the first black who will represent the United States in the world body. Landing needed, sometimes Clearwater, Fla. (AP) — If the open road calls but there's no road where you want to go, maybe the flying motor home is for you.

It's a helicopter with electric stove and refrigerator, air conditioning, built-in chess table, stereo tape deck, radio and color television — and four removable rotor blades.

Jim Siddall, who sells the live-in chopper, said the Heli-Home comes complete for $300,000 — around $840,000 with turbine engine.

And there's this problem: The bathroom can't be used in flight. "You'll upset the weight distribution, and possibly cause the helicopter to crash," Siddall said. "If you have to use the facilities you just ask the pilot to set down somewhere."

War a possibility

New York (UPI) — U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim, on the eve of his "extremely difficult" mission to the Middle East, said Sunday that if no breakthrough is achieved this year in peace talks between Arabs and Israel, there could be another war in the area in the next two years.

Waldheim, appearing on the television news program "Issues and Answers" (ABC), said his trip was timely because "there is a general readiness on both sides to resume the negotiating process, (and) there is more flexibility on both sides . . ."

But he added, "I have no illusions. My mission will be extremely difficult . . . and I am afraid that if we don't have a breakthrough in the negotiations this year, there may be another conflict in the next two years."

Space shuttle to begin stately road trip to test site

Palmdale, Calif. (AP) — The stubby, dart-like space shuttle — half rocket, half airplane — is ready for a road trip to a converted desert dry lake to answer an important question: Will it fly?

The 110-ton delta-winged cargo carrier, designed to zoom back and forth from earth to orbit, was hooked to a tractor that would pull it at a stately 5 to 10 miles an hour Monday to Edwards Air Force Base, 36 miles away.

The 122-foot-long orbiter with its 53-foot-high vertical tail fin and its convoy of security vehicles was expected to attract hundreds of residents as it crept along paved roads on a 90-wheel trailer rig, starting at sunrise.

The convoy was to reach its temporary home at the Dryden Flight Research Center at Edwards by late afternoon, said officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

The reusable orbiter craft is designed to be fired into space by disposable rockets, carry out scientific or technological work in orbit, then soar back home through the earth's atmosphere without power and land like a glider.

Testing will begin Feb. 18. At first, the craft will be attached piggy-back atop a Boeing 747 jumbo jet. In this pilotless setup, the mated aircraft will roll along the desert airstrip in taxi tests, then go aloft in a series of "captive" flight trials "just to see how the 747 handles with that big glob on the top," said Donald K. Slayton, veteran NASA astronaut who is in charge of the approach and landing tests.

AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSION MAINTENANCE

It is a recognized fact that in many instances, clutch failure in automatic transmission is due to products of fluid oxidation being deposited in the clutch plates causing slippage.

Chevrolet Motor Division recommends that every 24,000 miles or 2 years service, under normal conditions the automatic transmission should have the following services:

- Remove, drain & replace automatic pan.
- Remove, drain & replace suction screen.
- Check vacuum modulator valve, replace if needed.

Streisand garners three Globe awards

Los Angeles (AP) — Barbra Streisand was the big winner in a rainbow of categories, but tears were shed at the annual Golden Globes awards as Peter Finch was named best actor posthumously.

The Globes, presented Saturday night by the Hollywood Foreign Press Association, are the first of the major movie awards of the season. Often they serve as a precursor of winners of the annual Academy Awards.

Amid applause, Miss Streisand walked to the stage three times. The Brooklyn-born personality was a producer, an honor she shared with boyfriend Jon Peters, when she accepted a globe for "A Star is Born," named best comedy or musical film. Then as a lyricist, she again stepped to podium to share songwriting's top honor with lyricist Paul Williams for penning "Evergreen," which was featured in the same film.

And Miss Streisand was named best actress for her starring role in "Star."

The movie was "the most painful, the most difficult, and yet the most rewarding film experience I've had. It was a picture about and for love, and tonight I feel so much of it," she said.

The same film also won Kris Kristofferson a globe as best actor in a comedy or musical.

Actor Michael Murphy accepted Finch's award for best actor in a drama. The British-born performer, who died of a heart attack two weeks ago, played a deranged television newscaster in the film, "Network."

Murphy thanked the foreign press "for singling out one of the greatest actors of all time."

Faye Dunaway, who played a power-hungry rising network executive in the film, was named best actress in a drama.

"Network" also won awards for best screenplay by Paddy Chayefsky and best direction by Sidney Lumet.

But "Network" lost out as best picture to "Rocky," a low-budget story of the rise of a boxer.

Monday funeral slated for 'gifted' Prinze

Los Angeles (AP) — Family members and close friends planned to gather Monday to say goodbye to Freddie Prinze, who brought laughter to millions but could not cope with the sorrow in his personal life.

A small funeral was scheduled at 12.30 p.m. PST for the talented young comedian who shot himself in the head Friday. He left a suicide note explaining he couldn't "take it anymore," said police Lt. Dan Cooke.

Friends said Prinze, who was to be buried at Old North Church of Forest Lawn, was just too young to cope with the pressures of stardom.

James Komack, executive producer of the "Chico and the Man" television series that made Prinze a star, said Prinze was "the most gifted entertainer of his time" but was uncomfortable in the real world.

"Unfortunately, he had to grow up in the glare of the public spotlight and everything he did while approaching maturity was magnified," said Komack, who hired Prinze for the show when he was just 19. If Prinze had been older when he reached stardom, Komack said, "he would have been sure enough and seasoned enough to look at the world properly."

But Prinze was 22 and he had to cope with the recent breakup of a marriage to a woman he loved, the problems of trying to free himself from a contract with a manager with whom he had signed at 19 and the concern over an impending trial on charges of driving under the influence of drugs.

"All that charm, all that love, all that marvelous talent and all that niceness," Komack said. "He couldn't do that offstage. Offstage the world was still uncomfortable for him."

Johnny Carson, host of the "Tonight" show where Komack spotted Prinze, said the young actor "had tremendous talent. The sadness is always magnified when someone so young finds the pressures intolerable."

Said one friend, who asked not to be identified: "People don't seem to be able to understand that you can be talented, good-looking, healthy, that you could have fame and fortune and still have a problem."

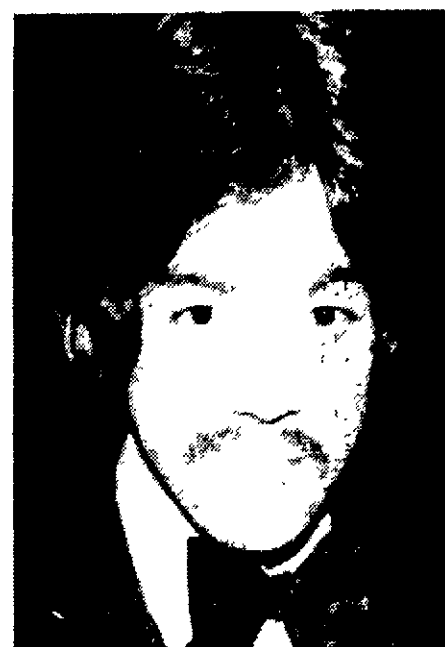

The friend said Prinze had not been joking early Friday when he pulled the trigger. To the horror of his business agent who looked on, "It wasn't a fun-and-games kind of thing," the friend said.

Prinze had just been visited by his psychiatrist and secretary, then telephoned his parents and estranged wife, Katherine Cochrane, 26. It was after speaking to her that he fired the gun, sending the fatal bullet through his head.

Doctors struggled to save him for 33 hours while the family and a few close friends, including entertainer Tony Orlando, held a vigil at UCLA Medical Center.

But a coroner's report issued Sunday said Prinze never had a chance of survival after shooting himself in the brain.

"We had hoped for the best for him," Orlando

Prinze at a Jan. 19 gala.

said after Prinze died Saturday. "God took him, and that's it."

Although Prinze often entertained friends with comic imitations, his early interest was in drama and ballet. But at New York's High School of Performing Arts, he was a big hit in a role in "Barefoot in the Park." He dropped out of school later that year, and was "discovered" by a talent agent while appearing at The Improvisation, a New York nightclub. The scout put him on the "Tonight Show" in late 1973.

It was on the "Tonight Show" that Komack first saw him and quickly signed him for the role of the young Chicano in "Chico and the Man."

The series, which began in late 1974, made him an overnight celebrity. During its first season, an average of 40 million people watched the comedy each week.

In the spring of 1975, Prinze met Kathy Cochrane of North Carolina while he was vacationing in Wyoming. They were married in Las Vegas that October and later had a son, Freddie Jr. It was her third marriage and his first.

Sunday afternoon, a spokesman for Forest Lawn said a number of close personal friends and associates would be pallbearers at the funeral, including songwriter Paul Williams, Chuck Hoffa, attorney David Braun, and Prinze's business agent, Marvin Snyder. A Prinze spokesman said entertainer Bob Hope would be an honorary pallbearer.

The funeral home spokesman said the eulogies would be delivered by Orlando, "Chico and the Man" co-star Jack Albertson; Komack; the Rev. Stanley Unruh; and Ron DeBlasio, Prinze's manager.

Stress suit lost in age discrimination case

Newark, N.J. (AP) — A federal appeals court, reversing a $550,000 judgment against Exxon Corp., says employers guilty of age discrimination cannot be punished for the emotional distress they cause.

The court said if older workers knew they could get huge awards from sympathetic juries, they wouldn't bother using administrative procedures designed by Congress to settle grievances out of court.

The ruling was made public Sunday by attorneys in the case tried in February 1975 in federal court here. The reversal was issued last week by the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia.

The decision voided a $550,000 award to the estate of Dilworth T. Rogers, a Summit, N.J., scientist who accused his superiors at Exxon of hounding him into early retirement at the age 60 to replace him with a younger, lower salaried worker.

The suit was filed in 1971, but Rogers died in 1973, two years before the case came to trial. His wife Gladys was as the plaintiff on behalf of his estate.

At a 13-day trial, witnesses said Rogers was forced out of the company by being given jobs requiring him to stand for hours.

Testimony revealed one Exxon executive had said, "The budget is tight and therefore in order to get some of the money we need we're going to take it out of the hides of the older employees."

After deliberating for a brief time, the jury awarded Mrs. Rogers $750,000. The U.S. Labor Department at the time said it was the largest sum ever assessed under the 1967 U.S. Age Discrimination in Employment Act.

U.S. District Judge Herbert J. Stern cut the award to $550,000 several weeks later. The appeals court said he should have abolished it entirely.

"In this case, the jury's award for pain and suffering is more a condemnation of defendant's activity than a measurement of the actual distress attributable to treatment by the company," the court said.

The court said the 1967 age discrimination law specified complaints should be first taken to the Labor Department and state rights agencies.

"The possibility of recovering a large verdict for pain and suffering will make a claimant less than enthusiastic about accepting a settlement for only out-of-pocket loss in the administrative phase of the case," the appeals court ruled.

When the pain and suffering award was made, Exxon had already agreed to pay the Rogers estate $30,000 to compensate for wages and benefits he lost by being forced into retirement. The appeals court agreed Rogers was entitled to such compensation. But that award also was reversed on technical grounds and sent back to Stern.

Consumer leader In the lion's den?

The possible appointment of a food boycott leader to a top job in the U.S. Department of Agriculture has drawn support from some farm circles and opposition from others.

Carol Tucker Foreman, president of the Consumer Federation of America, is in line to be named assistant secretary of agriculture for consumer affairs. Under a USDA reorganization plan, Mrs. Foreman would direct consumer-related activities, plus meat and poultry inspection and the food stamp program. Farm marketing duties would be transferred to another assistant secretary.

Opposition to the Foreman appointment was in many ways predictable. Among its manifestations are efforts to exploit the rift between producers and consumers of agricultural products.

For example, Rep. Charles Thone of Nebraska's First District, who has spoken for agriculture in the House and in return can count on much of the farm population in his district as part of his political base, was quick to deplore the possibility of naming a consumer advocate to a post in USDA. Thone was quoted as saying "in no way will she be a spokesman for agriculture. They can talk all they want about the mutuality of the producer's and the consumer's interest as far as agriculture is concerned, just like some slick Eastern politicians talk about the mutuality between labor bosses and farmers. I don't buy that, either."

There is little doubt that Thone expressed the feelings of many farmers who see the interests of labor and consumers as inimical to their own.

But the interests of the producers and consumers of agricultural products, while superficially perhaps at variance — the desire and need for profit on the one hand and the desire for cheap food on the other — are no inherently hostile.

Part of the problem is in the lack of understanding on the part of consumers of what it takes to produce quality food and part of it is a sort of paranoia on the part of many farmers who expect the worst from labor and consumers and who really aren't happy unless their expectations are met.

There is always hope, however, for a meeting of the minds. The promising accommodation between the various sectors will not of course be speeded by the work of those politicians — slick, Eastern or otherwise — who for reasons known best to them keep adding fuel to the fires of suspicion and distrust.

Perhaps it may not be wise from a management standpoint to put a novice in a top administrative job. But because Mrs. Foreman is a consumer leader is not reason enough to disqualify her. From an educational standpoint, it would be worthwhile if she served. She just might gain a new perspective on the problems of agriculture and that would not be all bad.

Public radio war intensifies

Troops are mobilizing for a fight over the establishing of a public radio network in Nebraska.

Nebraskans for Public Radio organizers await response to a statewide membership drive. And on the other side, commercial broadcasters in the state are being urged to undertake a political blitz to keep public radio from getting off the ground.

Dick Chapin of Lincoln, who heads up a Nebraska Broadcasters Association (NBA) committee on public radio, has asked "fellow broadcasters" to oppose public radio actively by contacting state legislators. "We need to know who is for us and who is against us. If we sit around on this, we will get beat," Chapin said in a recent letter to commercial broadcasters.

Chapin's pep talk to his troops sounds somewhat hollow, however, considering that he said in an interview that the NBA is "not basically opposed to public radio" as a concept. Commercial broadcasters oppose it, according to Chapin, because among state spending priorities "it ranks far from the top," and because of the content of public radio programming.

The high-priority status assigned the anti-public radio effort by commercial broadcasters is unusual, it would seem, in light of Chapin's assertion that the NBA is "not basically opposed to public radio."

Is it only an unselfish concern on the part of commercial broadcasters for the welfare of the taxpayer which prompts such opposition? Does the NBA feel an altruistic compulsion to shield Nebraskans from alternative programming? Or are there other, more out-front, reasons for opposing public radio?

The qualifications

Wanted: Government administrator for important worldwide operation. Highly sensitive position available at top pay with travel opportunities. Applicant must be discreet and able to win U.S. Senate confirmation. Cloak and dagger provided.

Wanna be director of the CIA? In forcing Ted Sorensen out of the picture, senators have not really defined what they want President Carter to propose in terms of a CIA chief. So you may have to guess which personal characteristics you should stress.

But there are some basics. Presumably, you should be able to keep a secret. Big mouths need not apply. Chronic laryngitis recommended.

You should be a private person, able and willing, even anxious, to avoid publicity or public attention. If you are unusually fond of corners, you may be the man (sorry ladies, not much equal employment opportunity on this one) for the job.

Next, how are you at lurking and slithering? Try walking down hallways as close to the wall as you can get. Practice standing behind trees.

And do some work on being surreptitious. Try tailing some strangers without being noticed. This will require some doorway standing and a top coat with a large collar — turned up, course.

You've got to be tough. Work on your stare and see how many strangers you can face down. Try to sit through an entire "Wide World" telecast of auto-racing.

Next, practice being insensitive. You can't let little human sensibilities or emotions get in the way. Wipe that smile off your face.

Look grim and determined. The fate of the world (well, at least the fate of the free world) hangs in the balance.

And be alert. Do not let the simplest sneeze go unnoticed. It may be a signal. Look behind you every now and then. And, of course, every night you should check the closets and under the bed. See that little old lady with the hearing aid. Remember it may be a radio or a recorder.

If you begin to practice some of these basic elements, you should be in top form in time for the Senate hearings.

the small society

By James R. Dickenson

Washington — There was fascinating and touching segment of the CBS television show, "Who's Who" last Tuesday night. It was an interview of a woman in North Platte, Neb., who had organized on a statewide basis a canteen service for servicemen on troop trains that stopped there during World War II.

It demonstrated poignantly how far we have come since then to President Carter's pardon of the Vietnam war era draft-evaders.

With a background of a female vocalist singing a pretty, sentimental ballad, "As Time Goes By," the show featured many photographs of young servicemen eating, drinking coffee and standing around a piano that one of them was playing.

There were lots of references to "our boys." One lady recalled how a contingent from Grand Island or Hastings or one of those nice central Nebraska towns had transported a load of food over to North Platte because they had heard that a bunch of Nebraska boys in a National Guard division was coming through.

They never showed up so the food went to a contingent of Kansas boys instead. No matter, they were still "our boys" to the Good Nebraska ladies who never ran short of food or good will or energy. "They'd come from a little town of 600 and with all the food you'd think there was 9,000," said one woman.

Jimmy Carter of Plains, Ga., should have no problem recognizing this small-town spirit. He might also reflect that World War II, the last of the pre-nuclear age wars, was the last time our young conscripts were treated as national heroes.

God knows we weren't in the Korean and post-Korean era, when we were reminders of an unpopular war fought in the nuclear shadows and in which the country turned to an old pre-nuclear hero to end.

And God knows the poor guys who fought in Vietnam weren't frequently referred to as "our boys." One of the shameful aspects of the anti-war effort, which was directed to an honorable end, was that men who answered their country's call, many of whom were killed or maimed, were reviled by their peers as storm-troopers.

Theoretically some good ought to come out of this. The jingoism and propaganda of most of our wars are embarrassing to look back on.

If you take the glamor and glory out of warfare, you reduce its likelihood, right? Wrong. Human nature is unchangeable in many basic ways, including sex and war, and we'll unfortunately be back at it again.

We also want to forget the Vietnam war. That's inevitable although for many impossible, because the trauma of the war has figuratively been chiseled on the inside of a lot of people's heads. Hopefully this includes such public servants as the secretary of state and secretary of defense.

If we're going to try to forget it, though, we ought to be fair and give everyone the opportunity to forget it. This includes the deserters who refused to go or return to Vietnam as servicemen.

Carter's blanket pardon applies to people who refused to register for the draft or report for induction. He says he'll examine the deserters on a case-by-case basis because they violated the Uniform Code of Military Justice.

This is a little hard for some to understand. The draft-evaders violated the U.S. Code. They're all violators of the law and there is an element of class and race discrimination as well.

A disproportionate number of those who took off in uniform were in uniform because they were too poor or uneducated to get college deferments.

There's also the implication that their defection was the result of suddenly coming face to face with the reality of combat. This is undoubtedly true in many cases. Anyone who's been in the service knows that the kind of guys who chronically go over the hill are not generally bleeding-heart idealists for mankind in general and the downtrodden in particular.

This sort of calculus of selfishness also was true of some draft-evaders, however. The problem is sorting out those who opposed the war and were following their consciences and those who were heeding the great call of self-preservation.

It's not worth trying. Carter ought to pardon everyone, deserters included, and put the whole matter behind us.

He's already outraged the hawks, and there's nothing he can do for the tragic young men who died or were crippled in Vietnam or for their survivors. And he doesn't have to worry about the pardon's interfering with the ability to raise armies in the future as many fear. There's a new generation of soldiers born every year.

It's one thing for those of us who were too old or too young to be directly affected by the war to remember it. Those of the Vietnam generation who want to forget it should be allowed to.

The privilege of being allowed to breathe

By Sandra Stancel

Washington — In Los Angeles, a state court ruled that a man who quit his job because he was bothered by co-workers' tobacco smoke had good cause for resigning and awarded him $990 in unemployment benefits. In Atlantic City, a state court judge ruled that a telephone company employee who was allergic to cigarette smoke had a right to work in a smoke-free environment.

In Chicago, dozens of persons have had to spend the night in jail because they were unable to post a $25 bond after being arrested for smoking on a city bus or train.

The battle between smokers and non-smokers is on and will probably get much hotter this year, spurred by the increasing activism of anti-smoking groups. Buoyed by the success of their four-year-old campaign to ban smoking in public places, militant non-smokers are pressing for more stringent action.

"What is needed is an extension of the non-smoking zones into every area of human activity," wrote attorney Samuel C. Morris in the British Journal of Addiction last spring. "There should be a total ban on smoking and it should not be left to the individual decision of employers, doctors, restaurateurs, club-owners, or even homeowners."

To prevent this from happening and to fight the growing number of anti-smoking laws, the Tobacco Institute, the lobbying and public relations arm of the tobacco industry has opened a counter-campaign aimed at protecting the rights of smokers. The institute argues that laws banning smoking in public places violate smokers' civil rights.

Defenders of the anti-smoking laws respond by quoting health authorities who say tobacco smoke is hazardous to the health of everyone who breathes it. In fact, according to some findings, smoke from the burning end of a cigarette, cigar or pipe is potentially more dangerous than the smoke inhaled by the smoker. Physicians are particularly concerned about the high levels of carbon monoxide in this smoke. "There is no question that non-smokers can develop toxic levels of carbon monoxide in smoke-filled rooms," said Dr. Raymond Slavin of the American Academy of Allergy.

The contention that tobacco smoke poses a serious health hazard to non-smokers has been questioned by the tobacco industry. According to the Tobacco Institute: "When all of the major evidence is considered, the claim of hazard to non-smokers withstands neither a scientific nor 'common sense' evaluation."

A goal of the anti-smoking movement is to place new restrictions on cigarette advertising. The Federal Trade Commission said last May it was investigating whether the tobacco industry was using deceptive or unfair advertising that would overly influence young people to start smoking. In requesting the investigation, the anti-smoking group Action on Smoking and Health (ASH) recommended, among other things, that the commission "limit illustrations in cigarette advertising to the product and package themselves, thus eliminating photos that imply smoking is a healthy habit engaged in by handsome, vigorous people."

Some members of Congress have been pushing the idea of limiting tar and nicotine content in cigarettes. Sens. Gary Hart (D Colo.) and Edward M. Kennedy (D Mass.) say they plan to reintroduce a bill to tax cigarettes on the basis of their tar and nicotine content — the higher the content, the heavier the tax.

"I'VE HEARD THE FOOD HERE IS VERY GOOD. MAYBE WE CAN TAKE SOME HOME AND TASTE IT"

The cigarette industry contends that there is no medical evidence that links tar and nicotine with disease. A study published in September by Dr. E. Cuyler Hammond, chief of epidemiology and statistics for the American Cancer Society, contradicts that view. The study reported that the death rate among smokers of cigarettes high in tar and nicotine was 16% higher than among comparable smokers of cigarettes with low levels of those substances.

Dr. Hammond emphasized that no form of smoking was as safe as not smoking, at all. But according to Dr. Gio B. Gori of the National Cancer Institute, any hope of turning the United States into a non-smoking society in the near future is unrealistic. Therefore, he insists, more attention should be paid to the development and use of less hazardous cigarettes.

There are others who say that encouraging smokers to quit is the only answer to the smoking problem. A recent survey of adult smoking habits showed that 61% of the smokers interviewed had made at least one serious effort to quit. Nine out of 10 smokers said they probably would stop if there was an easy way to quit.

Some smokers may not want to kick the habit. But if the non-smokers' rights movement has its way, they may eventually have to restrict their smoking to the privacy of their own homes and a few specifically designated public places.

'Graffiti of words'

Lincoln, Neb. I do not know what credential. H. L. Hoffmaster has to qualify as an art critic, and as a copywriter, he fails to disguise his power play of words borrowed from the Times. Post, Films in Review and Writer's Digest!

I am not in defense of poor art or the artist. There is always room for improvement. However, the UNL Faculty Art Show deserved a more professional critique than Mr. Hoffmaster's graffiti of words.

Hoffmaster's last art critique reflected his desire to be a comic staff writer for Milton Berle, but I fail to see the humor he has attacking a personality with each show. In his last critique, Doug Ross bit the dirt and his latest prey was Pat Rowan, winner of the grand prize at the Arena '75 art show in Binghamton, New York. Who are we as Lincolinites so limited in our exposure of good art to debate with New Yorkers?

Please, may we have a sensible, constructive art critique, composed with an aesthetic eye as to composition, media, element of structure and expression — instead of a dictionary.

There is a great exodus of talent and good art from Lincoln. With such unfavorable press, H. L. Hoffmaster might find himself criticizing the hog show at the local sale barn.

ARDIS KESSLER

Carter's pardon

Lincoln, Neb. Carter had hardly warmed the chair in the Oval Office, when his first act as president was to insult millions of men and women who had proudly served in our military forces.

By giving pardons to draft resisters and considering similar action for military deserters, he has opened a Pandora's Box worse than Ford's pardon of Nixon.

What has happened to this country. When I read in a Jan. 22 letter to The Star: "Let us bring our bravest, noblest and finest home because we need them more than they need us," I was sick. Since when do we make heroes out of those who deserted this country? I only wish I could speak to the dead. I could tell my friends that they were the cowards and traitors, and not the fine, brave men as those of us who knew them felt they were.

In this country, dissension is basic in accomplishing change. But when an individual chooses to disregard the law, he must also be prepared to accept the penalty. If these people choose to resist entrance into the military, they should accept the consequences of their actions. By granting pardons, Carter has legitimized their actions and invalidated the Selective Service Act. Are these the people we want our youngsters to look up to?

For those of us who served in the military, particularly in Vietnam, this period of our lives has become a monkey on our backs. It's an event you try to hide from others. People see you as either a baby-killer or a junkie, occupational doors are slammed shut and friends deny every having known you. When you think about it, when was the last time you saw a uniform being worn in public? Denial of military involvement has reached the point where even pride in the uniform is lost.

As far as I'm concerned, no pardons should have been given and if Carter upgrades less-than-honorable discharges to honorable, the honorable discharges that I and millions of others worked for won't be worth the paper they're written on. If this happens, those of us who served honorably should send copies of our discharges to Carter for use in his outhouse to replace the catalogue he might have left in Plains. They'll be worth little else.

Telephone rates

Lincoln, Neb. Legislation just introduced in the new Congress offers Star readers — our telephone company customers — an opportunity to halt the federal officials who are trying to bring about changes affecting our local phone rates and service. The legislation is known as the Consumer Communications Reform Act. Last year it attracted almost 200 representatives and senators as sponsors including the complete Nebraska congressional delegation.

The 1,300 independent telephone companies, of which LT&T is a part, and the Bell System are supporting the bill, which would update and clarify national communications policy. We are concerned that the action of bureau officials in Washington ultimately could force basic rates for residential and small business service up by 60% in the next decade — exclusive of inflation — according to projections by objective researchers.

The issue involves Federal Communications Commission decisions that foster "contrived competition" in the telecommunications industry. The FCC wants business firms and the general public to be able to purchase their own telephones and it wants big businesses to be able to use private long-distance networks separate from phone company facilities. This so-called competition is not in the public interest because of the drastic effect it will have on basic phone rates. Here's why.

Historically we have used two principles to price our service. For local service we charge based on the value of the service. Thus, businesses pay more than residences because phone service is more valuable to businesses. In effect, revenue from business customers makes a contribution to basic residential rates — helping to keep them low.

The other pricing principle involves averaging of long-distance rates. We charge based on distance, so that regardless of how expensive it might be for us to serve a little used rural route, the rates are the same as for calls between cities of comparable distance that are less expensive to serve. These two pricing principles have led to the low-cost, widespread telephone service which Congress called for in its Communications Act of 1934.

The problem is that under the FCC's "contrived competition" policies, so-called competitors are skimming off the profitable business — and the revenue contributions those customers provide to basic rural and residential rates. We don't think this is in the public interest because the end result will be higher rates for the average consumer, while a few big businesses save money.

Star readers — our customers — may well want to make their views on lowest telephone service known to their elected representatives.

Human life at stake

Ceresco, Neb. We decided to write this letter today after finding a bullet hole in our quonset. This happened on Sunday, Jan. 15, when coyote hunters were hunting without permission in the section where we live.

That Sunday afternoon I was outside doing chores when I heard the shot and then heard the bullet hit one of our buildings. It wasn't later that we found where it had actually hit. Earlier that afternoon our children were playing outside because we had no knowledge of coyote hunters in our area.

This is of great concern to us when we find it is not safe to walk in our own yard on a Sunday afternoon. We are wondering if the coyote hunter does not realize how far a bullet from a high-powered rifle travels.

We realize as farmers that the coyote is a menace, but we value our lives more than the small amount of livestock the coyote probably kills.

We are sure there is a safer way to hunt coyotes. Are the high-powered rifles really necessary? Are they going to keep on hunting this way until a human life is lost, be it a fellow hunter or an innocent bystander?

Farmers produce in very dry year

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

Dryland farmers using technology and working with the Soil Conservation Service, the Institute of Agriculture and Natural Resources at the University of Nebraska and the Natural Resources Districts have produced good crops in a very dry year without irrigation.

There were essentially no moisture reserves in spring 1976 and below normal rainfall, and dryland farmers in some areas of the state had what Dr. Howard Wittmuss calls "about half a crop compared to a good year."

Wittmuss is a UNL agricultural engineer but shares the credit with other areas of the management development team citing new machines, herbicides, new types of terraces that store water instead of just slowing it down and new varieties of corn and sorghum that tolerate poor weather.

"Some of the new corn varieties actually tolerate very dry conditions about as well as sorghum does. We have found that corn can be more profitable than sorghum on dryland with good management in eastern Nebraska," he said.

The prairie pioneer with his picturesque plow is gone because the plow disturbed the soil to a depth of six inches allowing it to dry out. The crops literally died of thirst and the farmers suffered economically.

"These things have become available in the last 10 years: new planters that don't disturb the soil and new tillage equipment that maintain plant material on the surface of the soil and conserve moisture," he said.

Farmers are rapidly adopting new tools like the chisel plow, new minimum tillage planters and new herbicides because they need to make fewer trips over a field to save time, fuel and wear on their tractors.

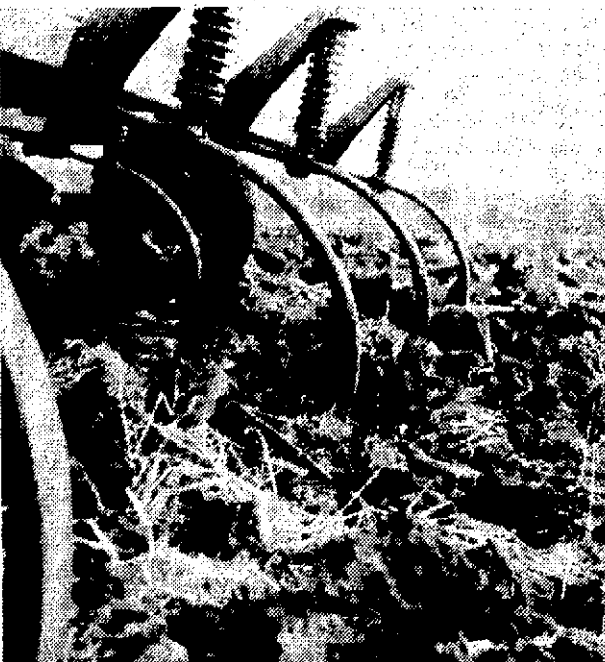

Four years of testing seven different methods of minimizing tillage demonstrated that less tillage saves money but also produces more corn, sorghum and soybeans at the same time.

"The key is moisture. You lose an inch of rain when you plow and you also double your soil loss. Today we have good dependable herbicides that make cultivation unnecessary. When you cultivate you can dry the soil to the depth of tillage," he said.

Wittmuss notes that technology alone isn't enough to make a better crop. "The farmer must be able to deliver a high degree of management successfully. It is a new technique that involves timing as well as applying technology but it works," he said.

There are no general rules for the technology because as you go west in Nebraska, soil types change, there is less rainfall and the methodology of tillage has to change to match the environment.

"The individual farmer interested in adopting this new technology should contact his county agent to learn the technique for his area. The county agent can arrange meetings with experts from the university and from companies that make the new varieties to explain how to make it work in their area," he said.

Number of burned acres in '76 is lowest ever

While more range, forest and field fires occurred in Nebraska in 1976 than in any previous year, the acreage burned over, was the lowest on record.

Joseph E. Range, Extension and assistant state forester, said 2,687 fires burned over some 21,694 acres the past year. However, reports from fire chiefs showed an average of only eight acres burned per fire. "No fires blackened as many as 5,000 acres, and only five fires burned 1,000 acres. Almost 90% of the fires reported burned less than 10 acres," Range said.

Fires occurred during each month of the year, with one-fourth of the total occurring during July and August 1976, the statistics show.

Major causes of fires and the total number follow: debris burning, 798; railroads, 763; equipment use, 278; lightning, 173; smoking, 170; children, 50; fireworks, 35; arson, 34; electric fences, 23.

Bill to save high plains soil slated for House

Stillwater, Okla. (AP) — A bill that would allow farmers in parts of the Great Plains to collect up to $30 per acre each year in federal payments for growing soil-building crops was to be introduced into the U.S. House of Representatives Monday.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., said the bill would encourage farmers to withdraw their less productive acreage from active use and help reduce the effect of wind and water erosion.

The proposed legislation would apply to the areas in the High Plains Conservation District, including the western parts of Oklahoma, Texas, Kansas, Nebraska, North and South Dakota, and the eastern parts of Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and New Mexico.

Rep. W. R. Poage, D-Tex., has agreed to be the principal sponsor of the bill.

Conservation to be focus of conference in Grand Island

Grand Island — Water, energy and soil conservation will occupy the spotlight during the 1977 Mid-Nebraska Irrigation Show and Technical Conference scheduled at Conestoga Mall Feb. 10.

"Dr. William Splinter of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln will discuss alternative energy sources for irrigating in the future. Use of two theaters will allow educational topics to be presented twice during the day," explains Dean E. Eisenbauer, UNL district extension irrigationist at Clay Center. Displays of irrigation equipment in the mall area will be open from 8:30 a.m. through mid-afternoon.

Weekly Grain Report

By Dominick Costello
Farm Editor

The grain stocks report was just as nasty as we predicted. It showed more grain on farms and in elevators than anyone in the grain trade expected, but we did predict just that in this space last week.

The larger-than-expected grain stocks and a larger-than-expected planting intentions report have put a double whammy on grain prices for a while.

The upward movement in grain prices has halted but there is no sure way of knowing whether we have reached a peak in prices for this year. Reports of damage to winter seed corn supplies did jolt the market for a few hours but it didn't last because of ample supplies of available seed.

It is unlikely that we will see a major increase in cattle feeding simply because there aren't a lot of cattle available to move into lots at present prices. If feeder prices do rise as expected it could discourage feeding.

Hog numbers and poultry numbers are up and still rising but need to be watched closely as they can turn around quickly.

Exports are another thing to watch but there is no real reason to expect a major improvement in prices as of today due to exports.

India is having less than desirable weather. Argentina is getting a lot of rain at wheat harvest and has a short corn crop. The production of fish meal is down which could still help soybeans.

Watch the Brazilian soybean crop. It could hurt our prices.

Breeding problems cited in confinement of gilts

Holdrege — Although more study needs to be done, raising gilts in total confinement appears to cause increased breeding problems, said Dr. Dwane Zimmerman, University of Nebraska-Lincoln animal science professor.

"The preliminary evidence indicates that some confinement situations have an effect upon the (gilt's) sexual centers in the brain so that they are not able to respond to normal estrous (heat) stimuli," he said.

Although the nature of the difficulty still is obscure, the main problems appear to be delayed puberty and an increased incidence of silent estrus, he said.

Zimmerman made the remarks Thursday to nearly 200 persons at the Phelps County Agricultural Center during the last of three Area Swine Days.

He cited research indicating that failure of gilts reared in confinement to develop sexual maturity and exhibit regular estrous cycles may be influenced by reduced exercise and physical and psychological stress.

Zimmerman said studies also have shown that there is a "dramatic" increase in ovulation rates, litter size and prenatal survival by waiting until the second estrus before breeding gilts.

"We generally recommend that producers not breed gilts until they reach at least their second estrus," he said. "There is some improvement in reproduction by waiting until the second estrus and appears to be even more (improvement) in the third."

Clarke-McNary trees ready

Lincoln — Thirty individual species of trees and shrubs are available now through the Clarke-McNary tree distribution program, according to Neal E. Jennings, district Extension forester at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

This year's distribution began Nov. 1 with 3.3 million trees, and about two million have been sold. According to Jennings, about 1.3 to 1.4 million are still available.

"We're short on some species of hardwood shrubs, so anyone wanting them should call now," the community forestry specialist said. He pointed out that there is a good supply of conifers left.

Cost of the trees is $14.50 per hundred trees including tax and mailing. The trees will be shipped by April 1 from Bessey Nursery at Halsey. For information to establish a windbreak and to order Clarke-McNary trees, contact your county Extension agent or your Soil Conservation Office.

Spotlight On Agriculture

By Dominick Costello

There is a story circulating in the cattle industry that illustrates the frustration of cattle feeders. It seems that in 1950 a farmer took his wife out to celebrate their daughter's first birthday. They spent $2.50 each for a fancy steak dinner at a time when cattle brought $38 for 100 pounds of steer.

This year the couple went out to celebrate their granddaughter's first birthday. Cattle still go for $38 per hundredweight but the dinner cost $9 each.

The efficient farmer is feeding a much more densely populated world, but food prices are going up with nearly all the increase coming after the food leaves the farm.

These added costs include the increase price of energy, labor, government regulations, packaging, processing, and transportation.

Costs have gone up on the farm too. That steer that was profitable for ranchers and feeders in 1950 was a loser for cattlemen in 1976.

Livestock feeders have been successful in urging employers to give beef certificates as Christmas gifts to their employees. This past year more than 12,000 pounds of retail beef cuts were given instead of the usual Christmas bonus.

Barges stuck in the frozen Mississippi River are an important factor in grain prices because shipments of grain to the ports are much more expensive when delivered by rail.

It has fouled up the exporting of grain from the Gulf ports and has made U.S. grain less attractive in the world market because of higher delivery costs and interrupted delivery schedules at port.

Learning how to deal with strip-mined land to restore its productivity as farm land is making progress but problems remain.

Much of the land was left too rough for use by farm machinery but flattening it out contributed to sheet erosion and further soil damage. Scientists have learned some new furrowing techniques similar to terracing that seem to work better.

O. L. Bennett, supervisory soil scientist at the U.S. Department of Agriculture, is working on the soil restoring project. He claims it should be possible to build better soils in eastern states than soils which existed before the coal was removed.

Higher rates of rainfall aid the development of soils from composted materials like city sewage sludge. In the West where it is much drier, it will be more difficult to make new soils.

You aren't going to believe this but a guy named Bill Zipf, is considering franchising a new model privy for use as a yard decoration on suburban lots.

Some folks have put windmills and hand pumps on their lots but never use them. But why not use privies? Before you dismiss the idea, keep in mind that pet rocks did sell pretty well.

The effort the Common Market agricultural experts made to get their farmers to feed their dried milk surplus appears to be a colossal flop.

The feed compounders formula is available at 10 cents a pound which is competitive with soybean meal in Europe. Only 3,000 pounds have been used out of the 100,000 pound goal.

Poland is buying a lot of meat this year. Purchases included 8,300 tons from Australia, 7,200 tons from New Zealand and 10,000 tons from Argentina. They are said to be looking for more because they had to slaughter a lot of cattle due to the drought in that country. Production is expected to drop in the coming year.

The new Federal Grain Inspection Service (FGIS) will have 900 employees when they start their work. But they expect the agency to expand to 2,100 employees by the time the agency is fully operational in about 18 months.

The new inspectors will get two weeks of intensive training plus two more years of extended training.

In the meantime, the whole FGIS system is under fire because it is costing the grain trade a lot more money than was expected.

Chicago-Omaha rail unity urged

Washington (UPI) — A Department of Transportation report on railroad standards has called for consolidation measures involving five railroads using the Chicago to Omaha routes.

Lee Fisher, a planning official in the Federal Railroad Administration, the DOT agency that prepared the report, said the consolidations could involve mergers.

The report said the rail route between Chicago and the Omaha Gateway "is marked by redundant service provided by five Class I railroads."

The railroads include the Burlington Northern, the Illinois Central Gulf, the Rock Island, the Milwaukee Road and the Chicago & North Western.

The report said if the Chicago-Omaha rail corridor were "rationalized" by consolidations both maintenance and rehabilitation costs would be reduced.

"Without rationalization," the report said, "a substantial amount of track will have to be rebuilt."

Fisher said the Chicago-Omaha corridor was the first "we looked at when we began this analysis."

"Investment is so diluted over so many lines that the service has deteriorated incredibly," Fisher said.

The Chicago to Omaha route was one of 10 railroad corridors listed in the report with "consolidation potential."

Another was the corridor between Omaha and Kansas City to Denver and Pueblo, Colo.

That corridor is also used by five railroads, the Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific, Burlington Northern, Santa Fe and Rock Island.

Omaha woman arrested in man's knifing death

Omaha (AP) — A 50-year-old Omaha woman was arrested Saturday in connection with the stabbing death of a North Omaha man.

Police Sgt. Robert Olson said the woman was arrested on suspicion of homicide after she was questioned at police headquarters. Olson said she will be charged in the death of Philip N. Nelson, 36, who was found dead Thursday in his home.

An autopsy indicated Nelson was stabbed to death. Olson said a folding knife, believed to be the weapon used to kill Nelson, was found in the woman's home.

Percy Eichelberger accused of 2nd-degree sexual assault

United Press International

A senior University of Nebraska football linebacker has been released on his own recognizance pending a Feb. 15 preliminary hearing on a charge of second-degree sexual assault.

Deputy Lancaster County Atty. Ron Rehm said the charge was filed against Percy Eichelberger in connection with an incident last Tuesday night in the Schramm Residence Hall.

Rehm said campus police alleged Eichelberger assaulted a female resident in an elevator. The alleged victim escaped injury.

Rehm said second degree sexual assault is a sexual contact by force and carries a maximum penalty of up to one year in jail.

The schedule of sessions follows: March 1, Panhandle Station, Scottsbluff; March 3, Ramada Inn, Kearney; March 4, Camelot Inn, York; March 7, Holiday Inn Northeast, Lincoln; March 8, Holiday Inn, 72nd and Grover, Omaha; March 9, Villa Inn, Norfolk; March 10, Town House Inn, O'Neill; March 21, Ramada Inn, North Platte; and March 22, Holiday Inn, North Platte.

Worms could cut taxes by eating waste

Omaha (AP) — Feeding garbage to worms rather than dumping garbage into a landfill can reduce taxes, say two Omaha area men.

Robert E. Ridder and Bill Knipscher have 500,000 worms wriggling in beds in an Omaha warehouse as part of a new program to dispose of garbage while improving the environment.

They are feeding the worms waste now and are keeping them at set temperatures. They plan soon to turn them loose on garbage saved by housewives.

The two are convinced the worms not only will eat the waste — cutting taxpayer expense of collecting, hauling and burying — but also will excrete fertilizer which can be sold.

Authorities have found that worms can devour tons of organic wastes and produce "castings," a powdery substance which adds nitrogen and minerals to the soil.

The castings are sold for organic gardening, potting soil, reclaiming strip-mined land, enriching cropland and stimulating forest growth.

Properly cared for, the 500,000 worms should double their numbers in 60 to 90 days, Knipscher said.

Low wage earners may get tax bonus

Omaha (AP) — Sen. Edward Zorinsky is urging all wage earners who had limited incomes during 1976 to check into their eligibility for an earlier income credit this year.

Certain lower income workers may be eligible to receive a special payment or a tax reduction of up to $400 from the federal government.

The former Omaha mayor said he is concerned because many of the people who are eligible for the earned income credit may not be required to file a tax return because their earnings are too low.

As a result, they may lose out on either the payment or tax reduction, simply because they are unaware of the need to file a 1976 federal income tax return, he said.

To qualify for credit individuals must have less than $8,000 in total income, including income from wages, salaries, tips or other employee compensation and self-employment income.

Rebel says union clout weakened

Pittsburgh (AP) — United Steelworkers rebel Edward Sadlowski renewed his attack Sunday on the union's no-strike agreement, charging it has weakened the USW's bargaining clout with the steel industry.

Sadlowski appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press" with his opponent, Lloyd McBride. The two men are waging a heated battle to succeed retiring USW President I.W. Abel when the union's 1.4 million members vote Feb. 8.

The no-strike pact — known as the Experimental Negotiating Agreement (ENA) — was signed in 1973. It prohibits a nationwide steel strike and requires all unresolved contract items to be settled by binding arbitration.

"I am bitterly opposed to the concept of ENA, both from a philosophical and practical aspect," said Sadlowski, of Chicago.

"We've seen our bargaining posture diminish behind the autoworkers, rubber workers and coal miners and we have not kept abreast of profits in the steel industry."

McBride was not asked about ENA but has said previously that although he supports the concept he would abandon it if it becomes disadvantageous to the union.

ENA covers about one-third of the union's membership. Regardless who wins the election, ENA will govern this year's steel negotiations which begin one week after the Feb. 8 balloting. However, it remains to be decided if ENA will be used again in 1980.

The campaign bitterness and the legal maneuvers by each candidate have raised fears that the election outcome may be challenged, thereby affecting the start of contract talks.

Abel has already said that if Sadlowski wins he will quit before his scheduled June retirement and have nothing to do with negotiations.

McBride, who is backed by Abel and is the apparent front-runner, said Sunday he expects to win by a 60-40 per cent margin. He also expressed confidence that the election would be conducted fairly and that the outcome would not be easily challenged.

Sadlowski, however, saw it differently. "I was already victimized by the election process in 1973 when running for district director and having that election stolen," he said. Sadlowski lost to a candidate hand-picked by Abel but then won in a court-ordered election re-run.

McBride repeated his charges that Sadlowski was financed by people outside the union bent on influencing the course of the labor movement.

Sadlowski said, however, his candidacy represents an opportunity for change.

"I find the union now becoming very compatible with the steel industry rather than with the membership. Our team offers a visionary concept of taking our union into the mainstream of the American labor movement," he said.

Event shows poetry alive

By Deb Gray
Star Staff Writer

Ever since he came to Lincoln six years ago, poet Greg Kuzma, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln associate English professor, said he wanted to see a series of poetry-reading programs here.

The first of "hopefully many meetings" happened Sunday as 10 Nebraskans read their poetry to a near-capacity crowd at Sheldon Art Gallery auditorium.

The setting was informal and the program was long — about two-and-a-half hours.

Those who read were Jack Collom, Bill Kloefkorn, Ted Kooser, Greg Kosmicki, Mordecai Marcus, Claire Mattern, Nancy McCreery, Charles Mignon, Bill Regier and Roy Scheele.

Some poems were brilliant. Some were pretentious; others cliché.

But a lot of fine material was presented — too much good stuff to discuss in this space. If nothing else, the program was a testament — that the art of poetry is alive and solid in Nebraska.

Some poems were intensely personal.

Ted Kooser's "Spoils," a poem about divorce, included an intriguing image: "the tirewhine of a marriage failed." Greg Kosmicki's "Ambulance" talked about the death of his brother.

Another Kooser poem, "Attention, K-Mart Shoppers" was political, a scathing indictment of government corruption, the FBI and the CIA.

Some poems, such as Nancy McCreery's "A Long View As You Drive Around Lincoln, Nebraska," were pastoral in tone.

Some of the best poems did what much good poetry does — sharpen our perception into our everyday environment.

Jack Collom's "In the Study" described the "pastel tomb" atmosphere of a Grand Island faculty lounge. Bill Kloefkorn, associate English professor at Nebraska Wesleyan University, captured Satured night at the Moose Lodge.

Ms. McCreery read a love song written to her dentist. Kooser's "Death at the Office" described the atmosphere in his insurance office the day after an employee's death.

Kloefkorn also read selections from "ludi, jr." his fourth poetry collection. Titles are only a handle, but some of these are so infectious, they're worth mentioning.

Included were "disguised as a square knot, ludi jr. infiltrates the boy scouts," "ludi jr. is told not to stay in the amen corner," and "after spending 97 years with his nose to the grindstone, ludi jr. admits that he has failed in his effort to invent the wheel."

Kuzma announced the next poetry reading will be April 12. In fairness to the poets themselves, it is hoped that the next program will not include as many poems — the last poet deserves the opportunity to read to as large an audience as the first.

Diversity lacking in public boards

By Bob Reeves
Star Staff Writer

The lack of diversity in many of Lincoln's public and private decision-making boards works to the disadvantage of the average citizen, said Byron Peterson, a leader of Lincoln Alliance Sunday night.

Peterson was one of a panel discussing the power structure in Lincoln as part of a series sponsored by local churches and University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus ministries.

He gave two examples of public boards which lack diversity of membership. The Lincoln school board has no low-income members, none from the working class, no racial or ethnic minority members, and none from the north or west side of the city, he said.

All school board members "seem to be from one small pocket at the extreme edge of the community," he added.

Another example, the Lincoln Electric System board, is composed of 9 members, eight of whom represent the business community, Peterson said.

He said citizens have difficulty influencing such boards because their members are not accountable to the entire community.

Peterson said the alliance, which "speaks for more average citizens than any other group," attempts to lobby for those not directly represented in decision-making.

Dick Herman of the Lincoln Journal, another panelist, noted that low income and working-class people usually don't have time to get involved in public affairs.

Jesse Payne, executive director of Lincoln Action Program and also a panelist, suggested that employers should make it easier for workers to participate in government by giving them time off with pay to serve on boards and attend public meetings.

Panelist Paul Amen, president of the National Bank of Commerce, noted that "management people" employed by banks are expected to serve on such boards and are given compensatory time to do so.

"Public service workers" such as tellers are not given time off for such reasons, however, he said.

Besides decision-making boards, panelists enumerated a wide range of power groups in Lincoln: the news media, the business community, public schools and colleges, elected officials and the government bureaucracy, labor unions, churches.

Several panelists agreed that power in Lincoln is more "diffused" than in other cities and that anyone who has the time and money to get involved can become part of the power structure.

Dan Briscoe transferred to Vets Hospital

Dan Briscoe, Nebraska National Guardsman who has been unconscious since accidentally shooting himself in the head Jan. 12, has been transferred from Lincoln General Hospital to Veterans Hospital.

His condition remains "unchanged," according to a Veterans hospital spokesman.

On Jan. 17, Briscoe's condition was still listed as "critical" at Lincoln General hospital. He was transferred to Veterans Hospital sometime early last week.

A police investigation labeled the shooting accidental. It apparently occurred while Briscoe was playing Russian roulette.

Briscoe identified himself last November as the guardsman who had been the victim of a mock hanging during training in Georgia last spring.

Baker wants more gorilla role credit

Hollywood (UPI) — Rick Baker, who portrays "King Kong" in the closeups of the big ape, wants more credit for his contributions to the runaway hit movie.

Baker, 26, says he created the costume and makeup for the film and claims producer Dino DeLaurentiis denied him screen credit for his acting work.

Baker, who received an Emmy for his makeup job in "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pittman," said he made a study of gorilla behavior and used that knowledge to play kong.

Redford's film is best

New York (AP) — Elizabeth Taylor presented actor-producer Robert Redford with the New York Film Critics' award Sunday night, honoring "All the President's Men" as best picture of the year.

In accepting the award for "All the President's Men," Redford said, "I'm ver proud of this film. It represents something very personal to me . . . and it thrills me to death."

Other winners of the Film Critics' award who attended the dinner at Sardi's included Jason Robards, Jr., best supporting actor for "All the President's Men;" Robert DeNiro, best actor for "Taxi Driver," and Paddy Chayefsky, best writer for "Network."

Alan Pakula received the best director award, also for "All the President's Men."

Best actress award went to Liv Ullman for her role in "Face to Face." Talia Shire was chosen as best supporting actress for her role in "Rocky."

Query Examined at Nebraska Central Annual Meeting

1976 was the best year ever for Nebraska Central Building and Loan Association according to a report from Burt Folsom at the association's annual meeting last Friday.

Total assets, mortgages and savings increased 16% over the preceding year with each reaching new highs by year-end. Earnings were up a healthy 36% which helped the 84 year old company to pay out 25% more in 1976 dividends to its savings customers.

When asked how Nebraska Central could pay a rate 25% more than banks and 19% more than other savings & loans on immediately available passbook savings, Folsom explained that Nebraska Central is stronger — the only savings and loan association in Nebraska with more than 12% reserves and paying regular corporate income taxes; that Nebraska Central has always paid more on passbook savings without the costly frills of pots, pans, premiums and other gimmicks;

that Nebraska Central, through State Charter, enjoys more freedom to serve its customers and successfully avoids some Federal government interference; that Nebraska Central has continuing credit relations with commercial banks rather than the Federal Home Loan Bank; that Nebraska Central has protected its customers through private insurance and self insurance rather than the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation.

William F. Swanson, Vice President of the University of Nebraska, was reelected to the Board of Directors. Besides the Officer-Directors, B. W. Folsom and Lowe R. Folsom, other continuing Directors are Paul W. Hyland, Partner Hyland Bros. Co. Lumber, and L. R. Ricketts, Partner Mattson, Ricketts, Davies, Stewart and Calkins.

Save coffee: Dig for roots

By Harry Jackson
Star Staff Writer

With coffee prices circling the $3 a pound mark, coffee hounds may soon seek a break from the brew's grip.

Returning to the roots is the solution of Roger Welsch, folklore instructor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, and a self-proclaimed weed lover.

And in referring to roots, Welsch was speaking more literally than you'd think. Two roots, he said, can serve as coffee substitutes or at least good tasting mixtures.

Dandelion roots, the scourge of dedicated lawnkeepers, and chickory roots, already a known coffee mixture, are available to the resourceful, without having to go through merchants, he noted.

"I used to have friends who'd go to New Orleans frequently and I'd always ask them to bring me back some chickory," Welsch said. "Then I found out that it grows everywhere around Lincoln. I've found it in parking lots and roadside ditches between here and Omaha."

Dandelion roots can be gathered easily, he said, if you don't mind having your friends see you grazing your lawn or a local park.

Pioneers bought green coffee, then roasted and ground it, he said. It was imported then, just like now; it was expensive then, just like now.

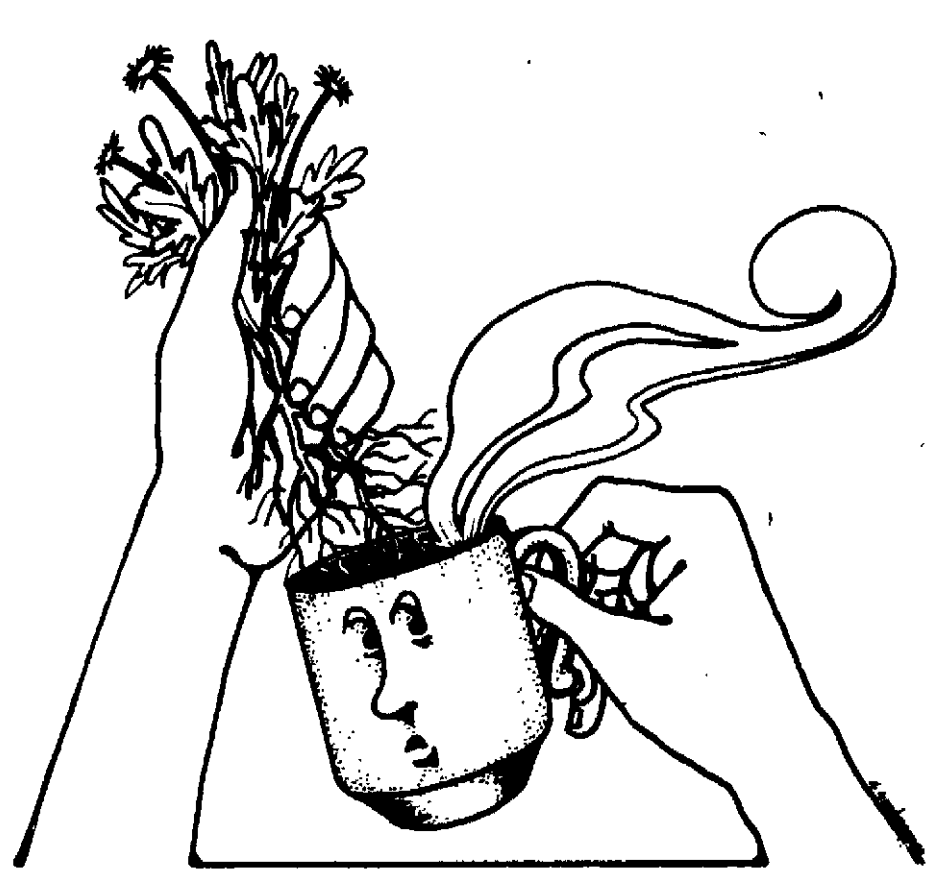

But then, coffee consumers used alternatives. "Pioneers almost always stretched coffee," lacing it with available roots, beans or seeds, Welsch said.

The alternatives were endless.

Pioneers used parched grains such as barley, sorghum and cornmeal, wheat, corn, rye and dried peas or carrots.

The process is simple: Roast the grain, bean or root until dark. Grind it as fine as possible. If you don't have a grinder, wrap your grains in a clean white T-shirt and pound it with something.

The result can be used in a coffeemaker, but if you like authenticity, pour it into a pot of boiling water. When the foam comes to the top of the pot, put ground egg shells or cool water in it.

The heavy sediment should settle to the bottom. You can dip or pour your drink off the top.

If you still want coffee's caffeine zing, mix in a small amount of your own coffee.

Welsch warned that if you got to a meadow to pull weeds for processing, it's best to know what you're doing. Some weeds are poisonous.

Although he didn't suggest particular books, he said book stores or libraries will have information on identifying plants. The Nebraska Department of Agriculture would be a good source too, he said.

The only caffeine alternative to coffee is tea, Welsch said. The conventional kind, not the herbal varieties.

But, if you decide to drop coffee and its caffeine effects, don't fear any physical withdrawal symptoms.

Careful shopping avoids worst of coffee crunch

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer

There may be alternatives to paying the skyrocketing price of coffee.

Nancy H. Steorts, consumer advisor to the U.S. secretary of agriculture, notes that the cost of coffee varies with brands and types and that consumers might well examine all the alternatives.

According to figures prepared by the Agricultural Research Service Consumer and Food Economics Institute, a cup of regular coffee made with some brands costs 6½ cents while that made with other brands costs about 5 cents.

But a cup of coffee made from regular instant coffee costs less than 2½ cents per cup.

"If consumers are willing to switch to tea, they can cut costs further. Tea costs less than 1½ cents per cup, depending on how you make it," she said.

"They can also switch to beverages that might cost more but will provide nutrients that a cup of black coffee will not," she added.

Mrs. Steorts said that she is sure that many people will continue to drink coffee regardless of the inflated prices; and if they do, here are some suggestions:

- Avoid wasting it. Brew as much as you will drink but no more.
- Try coffee that is a little weaker than usual. You may like it just as well.
- Compare brand prices.
- Use regular instant coffee. Per cup of beverage, it costs only half as much as ground and less than freeze-dried coffee too.
- Compare the unit prices (cost per ounce or per pound) of different size cans and jars of coffee to find the best buys. Unit prices are shown on the display shelf in many supermarkets.
- And for those who are cutting down on coffee and trying another beverage, Mrs. Steorts makes the following suggestions:
 - Drink tea, or a cereal beverage at a third to a half the cost of coffee. You can often save by making tea with loose tea leaves or instant tea instead of tea bags.
 - Use bouillon occasionally, unless you are on a low-salt diet.
 - Drink milk made from nonfat dry milk powder. It costs less than coffee. Unlike coffee, it provides important nutrients — calcium, protein, riboflavin and many others. A six-ounce cup of milk made from non-fat powder provides about 70 calories, too. Coffee, without milk and sugar added, provides essentially no calories.
 - Use hot chocolate made from a home recipe or a commercial mix. It costs a little more than coffee. But for the extra cost it furnishes the nutrients of milk as well as some iron. A six-ounce cup provides 140 calories or more.
 - Use fruit and vegetable juices. Some cost no more than coffee and provide vitamins and minerals.

Birdman of Detroit lives for his canaries

Detroit (AP) — What has 300 legs, eats 3,240 eggs and 600 pounds of birdseed a year, and keeps Charlie Xuereb at home? Xuereb's 150 canaries, of course.

The song of the canary is the sweetest sound in the world to Xuereb, a balding man in his 70s.

"I cannot live without it," he said. "If they ever stop singing, I would go crazy. They sing here all day bringing life and music into the house. When they stop singing, I stop."

Xuereb came to America from Malta in 1937, and went into the bird breeding business, spending $12 for three canaries.

Since then, he has raised more than 70 generations of several breeds of canaries: the American Singer, Border Fancy, Norwich, Yorkshire, Red Thatcher, European Gold Finch and French Canary.

"Today a nice male canary would cost about $50 (only the males sing) and a female would cost about $10," Xuereb said. "A fancy canary would cost between $85 and $100."

The singing stops when the sun sets. When darkness falls, the canaries sleep. But Xuereb said he checks each cage with a flashlight before he goes to bed — and dreams about canaries.

Child abusers can find help

The National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse tells us that child abuse is now epidemic not only in the United States, but throughout the world. Last year, approximately one million American children were abused, and two thousand died painful deaths from beatings, burns, immersion in scalding water, etc.

Neglect (failure to provide a child with the basic necessities of life: food, clothing, shelter or medical care) is also child abuse. So is using a child for sexual gratification.

Child abuse can leave permanent physical scars — a crippled limb, impaired vision, a hearing loss and even brain damage. It causes antisocial behavior, failure in school, juvenile delinquency and emotional problems.

Parents who abuse their children need the kind of help that is now available through Parents Anonymous. It was founded by parents who had abused their children and had the courage to organize and seek solutions to their problem. They are headquartered at 2810 Artesia Blvd., Redondo Beach, Calif. 90278.

There are now 450 chapters in more than 300 cities. You can reach them toll free. In California dial 1-800-352-0386. Outside California, dial 1-800-421-1353.

Some questions:

Do you sometimes physically hurt your child because you're angry with yourself?

Were you mistreated as a child and now find yourself repeating your past?

Do you feel inadequate as a parent? Depressed? Unable to cope?

After punishing your child severely are you heartsick, ashamed and disgusted with yourself to the point of prayers and tears?

Have you ever injured your child, and then lied about it? ("He fell down the stairs" — or "out of bed"?)

If you can see yourself in any of the above situations, don't be ashamed. You are not alone. Call P.A.

Here are some questions and answers that might be helpful:

Who may report a case of child abuse? Anybody can.

Do I have any legal protection when I report a suspected case of child abuse? Yes. Persons who report in good faith are granted immunity from civil and criminal court action, even if the report proves to be erroneous.

How sure must I be before I report? There is no rule. If there is serious doubt, resolve the doubt in favor of the child, and report.

Must I identify myself when I report? No, but it would be better if you did.

Is hitting "child abuse"? It depends on the age of the child, what part of the body was hit, what was used to inflict the punishment and how serious the injuries are.

Do abusive parents hate their children? No. Most parents love their children, but in times of anger, they strike out at whoever is closest.

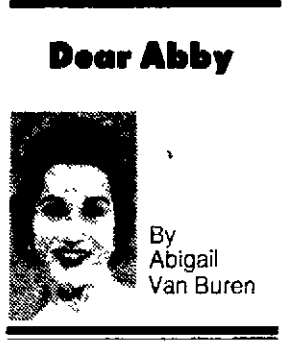

Do abusive parents ever learn to cope with their problems, and can the children be safely returned home? Yes. If parents receive the right kind of support and treatment, they can learn to handle their anger, and their children can be left safely in their care.

Does jailing abusive parents help solve the problem? No. It only satisfies society's need for retribution and protects the child only temporarily. Imprisonment does not provide treatment and counseling, which is what the abusive parent desperately needs.

If you think you need help, call P.A. now. If you suspect that a child you know is being abused, please, please report it. All reports will be strictly confidential, and your name will be withheld.

Children should be seen — and not hurt.

Have a handbag for all occasions

By Gerry Switzer
Star Staff Writer

The return of dresses this spring means the fashion-conscious will have to get their handbag collections in order.

Handbags have slimmed down but totes, carry-alls and attaches are still roomy enough to hold a variety of essentials.

According to Isabel Edmisten, accessories buyer for Miller & Paine, a woman ideally should have five handbags in her wardrobe.

She suggests a carry-all bag, and a business or globetrotter bag. The newest look in business bags is the attache, a handbag which resembles a small attache case with compartments for papers, notebooks, etc.

The handbag wardrobe should also include a casual bag, a dressy handbag and an evening bag, she said.

Just back from spring markets in New York, Mrs. Edmisten said the shoulder bag trend is fading although it will probably still be popular in carry-all and casual handbag lines.

With the romantic looks this spring full of color, fun and feminine allure, handbags are picking up the beat in lightweight straws, patchwork snake, embroidered denim, canvas and burlap, the so-called diastowel plaids, awning stripes, linens and the standard vinyl and leather.

Mrs. Edmisten said that vinyl is becoming more and more popular and some fine vinyls are nearly as expensive as leathers.

She said the organizer bag continues to be very popular. This bag usually has separate compartments for papers, hidden pockets for important documents, separate slots for checkbook, credit cards and sometimes even a fold-out lap desk for note-taking.

One of the key looks in dressy bags is the clutch bag — many with wrist straps or handslides on the back as a safety measure against purse-snatchers.

For casual to semi-dress wear, the swagger bag is still handy with its two convenient outside pockets, according to Mrs. Edmisten.

She said the frame satchel is still very popular but the free-form designs taking on whatever shapes the various fabrics allow are moving into prominence.

One of the best-selling casual bags this spring promises to be the canvas tote trimmed in leather, she said, adding that monogramming on these bags will be high fashion.

The spectator look is back in accessories, including jewelry and scarves.

Red being a top fashion color this spring, Mrs. Edmisten said that it along with bright greens and blues will be seen in the early spring accessories while the whites are expected to be popular into the summer.

Jewelry will be bright with porcelain hearts, flowers and butterflies with many of the heavier necklace pieces being strung on silk cord.

For the younger set, pillow-ticking stripes will be big in jewelry lines.

Scarves will be smaller squares and long styles. She said the 27-inch square scarf will not be as good this spring as the 24-inch but the long scarf will be reappearing in force.

Belts will be narrow, with the string tie type still leading the belt line, while umbrellas are slipping in more and more as fashion accessories. The utilitarian umbrella is expanding to a fashion item, larger in size, some ruffled and many coordinated with clothing in fabric and pattern.

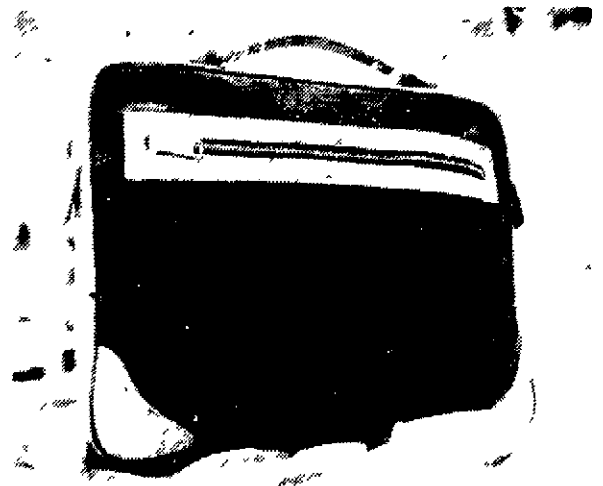

Also making a comeback in fashion accessories is the handkerchief, she said, noting that fine linen is difficult to come by today, but many Dacrons are available and popular.

Opening lead — ace of diamonds.

This deal occurred in the national team of four championship in 1949 and received lots of publicity because it was a good hand where I had missed my cue.

I was South and it turned out that I was right to override partner's double of four hearts, which East could have made.

West led the ace of diamonds, then played the A-J of hearts, which I ruffed. I led the queen of spades and took West's king with the ace, producing this position:

spades, queen of diamonds and ten of spades. On this last trick, West would have to discard a diamond from the J-10-8 or a club from the K-7-5.

If he discarded a diamond, I would cash dummy's king and put him on lead with a diamond; if he discarded a club, I would cash the diamond king and play the ace and a low club. Either way, I would make the contract.

Well, it's 28 years since I played the hand but I haven't forgotten it yet!

Birth control method aids forgetful people

St. Louis (AP)—A new birth control method designed for forgetful people is being developed at Washington University.

Dr. David W. Keller one of those working on the project, said it involves injecting into the cervix time-release birth control capsules that would provide protection for up to a year at a time.

Keller said the capsules are designed for "people with relatively poor motivation, such as those who cannot remember to take a pill or will not use other devices."

The capsules would be released slowly as they dissolve, Keller said, adding that they would act on the cervical mucus, preventing the passage of sperm into the uterus.

The amount of the contraceptive chemical needed is small compared with the conventional pill, Keller said.

And since the hormone is injected directly into the cervix and acts directly on cervix cells, concentrations of the substance do not build up in the blood, he added.

So far, Keller said, researchers have tested the new contraceptive only on cattle.

One researcher estimated that the capsules probably will not be marketed for at least five years.

Big majority condemns Arab boycott actions

By Louie Harris

A 71-6% majority of Americans disapprove of the refusal of Arab oil-producing countries to buy products or do business with U.S. companies that deal with Israel.

In this latest survey of 1,450 adults nationwide, 44-37% favor legislation that would impose tax penalties on any U.S. company that cooperated with the Arab boycott. (The last Congress passed such a bill but it did not become law.) And 43-39% favor a tougher law that would impose a fine or imprisonment on any company found guilty of cooperating with the boycott.

These public sentiments reflect sympathy with Israel in the Mideast conflict and resentment against Arab oil-producing countries for pushing up U.S. oil prices and contributing to inflation.

The latest findings also represent a record high of public resentment against the Arab oil-producing nations. Fifty-two per cent felt that the "increase in the price of gasoline here in the United States has been due a great deal to the Arab oil-producing countries raising their prices." And 31% attribute "at least some" of the increase to Arab oil price hikes. A year earlier, 46% placed primary blame for high gasoline prices on the Arabs, while in 1974, no more than 30% felt that way.

The following results also show strong anti-Arab sentiment:

—A 60-24% majority does not believe that

Harris Poll

"we need Arab oil for our gasoline shortage here at home, so we had better find ways to get along with the Arabs, even if that means supporting Israel less."

—A 74-11% majority agrees that "if we yield to Arab restrictions over oil now, we will soon find the Arabs dictating much of U.S. foreign policy, and that is wrong."

—A 73-12% majority resents that "the Arabs are getting rich on the dollars we are paying them for their oil, and as a result we and the rest of the world are suffering bad inflation and hardship, which is wrong."

Americans admit that oil price increases are not entirely the fault of the Arab nations, and recognize that Saudi Arabia recently raised its prices 5%, compared to a general 10% hike among OPEC members. In fact, a 51-22% majority agrees that "it is a mistake to blame the Arabs alone for the high price of oil, since non-Arab oil producing countries have led the drive for higher prices, and Saudi Arabia has tried to keep the price down."

Nevertheless, the percentage of Americans who blame the Arab oil countries for rising U.S. gasoline prices has risen from 68% in 1974 to 81% last year, to a current 83% in the latest survey.

San Francisco — The AAA warns drivers going into Mexico: "Stay on main roads. Don't drive at night. Find a motel about 4 p.m."

They say there have been 18 "incidents" of tourist holdups. Shake downs by police. Some shootings. Even suggest forming convoys of three or four cars for mutual support.

Hot spots are Culiacan north of Mazatlan on west coast Highway 15. The beautiful (but lonely) beaches between La Paz and Cabo San Lucas in Baja.

The government sent in army patrols. But a reporter there a month ago told me: "They say in La Paz that the Army is shaking down the campers they supposedly are protecting."

The Wall Street Journal had a scary story on the situation. Dan Sanborn who has excellent connections on Mexican highways — (his car insurance agents are at every border crossing) — wrote me business is way down.

He says: "I think the Journal and other papers are polishing up some things that have been going on for years. Like an occasional shake down."

American Airlines man said: "We are carrying a normal number of people. We expect our traffic to go up the next few months."

What to do? For a good many years, the golden tourist has been a protected species. Maybe the economic restlessness — campesinos seizing land, backyard heroin makers — has changed the climate.

If you get in trouble in Mexico, it's big trouble. Mexican law says you are guilty until you prove you're innocent. Meantime you sit in stony loneliness while they think it over.

They think slowly. No hurry. You're not going anywhere. CB radios are not allowed in Mexico. Not even sealed. They confiscate them. And probably will jail you while they fit you for the electric chair. (Local joke: "Sometimes the electricity fails and we have to finish them off with candles." Some joke!)

Guns are out in Mexico. You can get a permit for a hunting gun, but it's better to rent one when you get there. Permits issued by Mexican consuls sometimes don't work with local officials.

If a policeman stops you for a traffic violation ask — politely: "Can I give you the money to pay the fine for me?" (Something under $10 will do it. Officially, the tourist people say this is all wrong. But they do it themselves.)

If you want to complain, do it when you get home. Special Consular Services, State Department, Washington, D.C.

If you insist on having it out at the police station, you'll add the cost of the cop. And the duty sergeant. And a lawyer. And God help you.

If you have long hair or are under 30, don't every carry prescription drugs with you.

Don't get smart and have a pocketful of zig-zag cigarette papers on you. Nobody smokes Bull Durham anymore. Who are you kidding?

Don't ever get to the point of a formal arrest. It's a great climate, but Mexican jails are no winter cruise.

"... some other ski resorts besides the well-known Vail and Aspen?"

The biggest resort area in the West is right outside Salt Lake City — 40 minutes from the Hotel Utah, newly done over and the peak place to stay.

The resort areas are Alta, Snowbird, Park City and two smaller ones. American, United and Western fly in from everywhere. Bus service three times every morning. Return in the afternoon and have dinner in the rooftop restaurant. First class.

Brigham Young advised the Mormons to stay home and sell their products to the Gold Rush pioneers.

"If God had wanted the Mormons to have gold, He would have put it under Salt Lake City."

Brigham didn't know about snow jobs. But he was a wise man.

Finally, Vantage Longs.

The first long cigarette to bring good taste to low-tar smoking.

Like a lot of smokers you may like the idea of a longer cigarette. You may also want low tar.

But longer cigarettes usually have more tar. Well, Vantage just wouldn't go along with that.

So we worked. Until we could perfect a longer cigarette with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar. Not the lowest long cigarette you can find. But very possibly the lowest that you will enjoy.

New Vantage Longs. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage Longs. Never before has there been a long cigarette quite like it.

Try a pack today and see if you go along with us.

False start fails to foil Sports Center track unveiling

A note to file away for posterity: Saturday was the very first track meet in the super new facility at Nebraska's Sports Center.

It was time for the initial event. Starter Al Papik raised his gun. In a loud, clear voice he commanded, "Runners, take your mark!" A short pause was followed by, "Click." The gun failed to fire.

And so, the christening event in the brand new building began with a false start — in the mile run.

There could have been many a snafu in an opening meet — but there weren't. Sports Center director Jim Ross and Husker track coach Frank Sevine had them all ironed out.

The crowd of 3,000, in 16 degree weather, was certainly encouraging. It means the 5,000 capacity will surely be taxed for the Big Eight Championships to be competed here the weekend of Feb. 25-26.

Tickets are now on sale at the Memorial Stadium ticket office. All seats will be general admission for the Friday night prelims ($2), while all but a few student tickets will be reserved

($4) for the Saturday afternoon finals.

Another sport — baseball — stole the spotlight in Omaha last Thursday. That's when Larry Shepard was honored as the Sportsman of the Year by the Omaha Sportscasters' Association. Shepard, the pitching coach for the World Champion Cincinnati Reds, has been a Lincoln resident since the days he managed the old Lincoln Chiefs to a pair of Western League titles in the mid-50s.

While Shepard is generally given credit for much of the Reds success by developing a young pitching staff into baseball's finest mound staff, he remains very modest.

That's easy, 'Shep' says, by remembering some of the errors along the way, instead of just dwelling on the successes.

"I suggested we get rid of Dick Stuart when I came to Lincoln," Shepard laughingly recalls. "Then, he promptly went out and hit 66 home runs."

When Tom Seaver was first available to be signed to a major league contract — after an initial deal with the Atlanta Braves had been ruled void — Cleveland, Philadelphia and the New York

Mets bid for his services.

Shepard had just joined the Philly staff as a coach. "I labeled Seaver as not much of a prospect," Shep adds. "Then, there was Roberto Clemente. When I was managing the Pirates, I suggested he, 'just doesn't fit the needs of this ball club.'"

Tom Gorman, the 26-year veteran National League umpire, who just retired last season, was an entertaining featured speaker at the Shepard recognition dinner.

Gorman recalled the opening game of the 1968 World Series, when he was behind the plate, as one of his biggest thrills.

"It was Denny McLain (Detroit) against Bob Gibson (St. Louis) and Gibson set a World Series record by striking out 17 batters," Gorman recalls.

"Some writers came down to our dressing room after the game to get my comments about Gibson's performance," Gorman continued. "I told 'em, 'Heck, he didn't get 17. He only got 10. I got the other seven.'"

The commissioner called Gorman on the carpet the next day, wanting to know if he'd really said that.

"I told him, 'Sure. Gibson got 10 on swinging third strikes. I called the other seven out.' The explanation didn't help much, though. He fined me $200."

Though a fun-loving guy, Gorman is an imposing figure at 6-3 and 245 pounds. He says that while umpiring over 4,000 managers and ejected 164 different players and/or managers.

"But, I never had anybody lay a hand on me," he says. "I was raised in the 'Hell's Kitchen' area of New York. It's a tough neighborhood. Most everybody from there goes into the priesthood, the fire department or the electric chair."

State tourney field forecast

By Randy York
Prep Sports Editor

There are those who insist on looking five weeks down the pipe and try to imagine which teams will wind up in the State Basketball Tournament.

A quick dust of the crystal ball and one easily could come up with this Class A state tourney field — for Mar. 10-12 — Lincoln Southeast, Papillion, Omaha North, Omaha Burke, Grand Island, Hastings, Lincoln Northeast and McCook.

If you digested each and every team, your most logical surmise would register with two Lincoln qualifiers.

It could happen though, since Nebraska is experimenting with a wild card system in the selection of the Class A state tourney field.

Instead of eight districts, Class A will contest only six districts this year. Two at large teams will join the six district champions in the state tournament.

Those two wild card berths will be determined by winning percentage only, meaning as many as three teams from one district could qualify for state.

Using the Sunday Journal and Star ratings as a guideline with respect to district packaging, Southeast, Papillion, North, Burke, Grand Island and Hastings appear headed for district titles.

Assuming those six win, the non title-projected teams with the best records right now are Northeast (10-2) and McCook (9-2).

Of course, district competition never seems to run according to plan. Any number of things could happen.

The A-1 Lincoln district has three rated teams and seems the most power-packed. Papillion must contend with Omaha Benson in A-2 and North is locked in A-3 with Omaha Central, one of only two teams to conquer the top-ranked Vikings this season.

A-4 is the only six-team district. Burke faces quality in defending state champion Creighton Prep and Millard, the only other victor over North, in A-4.

Fremont is the most likely challenger for Grand Island in A-5. A-6 is the western district and skeptics squawking over its quality in the past should stay silent this winter.

Hastings is the A-6 favorite, but Kearney and McCook are competent challengers. Even North Platte and fast improving Scottsbluff could be considered darkhorses in that district.

If you're in the market for more darkhorses, Lincoln High (5-8) and Omaha Northwest (7-7) are dangerous prospects.

The Links have the respect of all Lincoln teams and Northwest, the Metro Holiday Tournament runnerup, could give Papillion and Benson headaches in A-2 competition.

North Platte, which owns a win over No. 3 Southeast, might be a sentimental favorite.

The Bulldogs (4-7) will have extra incentive to reward coach Doug Schakel with a state tourney appearance.

Schakel announced over the weekend he will resign his coaching duties at the end of the school year. He plans to keep his teaching post in North Platte. Schakel coached two years at North Platte. His career record is 194-85.

NWU, Concordia own changed cage squads

By Ken Hambleton
State College Writer

If you haven't seen either Nebraska Wesleyan or Concordia since December then you're in for a surprise when the two teams meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at NWU's Taylor Gym.

NWU, now 11-8 overall and 2-2 in the Nebraska Intercollegiate Athletic conference saw its three-game winning streak snap with a 81-69 loss to Doane Saturday night. And Concordia had its four-game winning string broken by Hastings in a 97-81 decision Saturday.

But both teams showed vast improvement over last season when the Plainsmen struggled to finish 6-16 and the Bulldogs limped to a 2-24 record.

Wesleyan's big change has come in the form of junior college transfer Steve Harris, a 6-1 forward Lincoln High graduate.

Harris, who scored 24 points against Doane Saturday night, is currently averaging 15 points per game and 10 rebounds per contest. His eight points in the first 10 minutes of the second half combined with six by NWU's other forward Bob Otto, helped the Plainsmen close to within eight points after trailing by 19 points with 15 minutes to play.

"Harris is probably the best 40-minute man we've ever had," said NWU coach Irv Peterson, who is in his 27th season with the Plainsmen. "He plays as hard as anybody I've seen and picks us up when we need it."

Peterson noted that Harris earned his first rest in four games, including two overtime games, Saturday night.

"Otto and Butler (center Blake) are the only two people on our team that played together much for us last season and we've gotten some help from some other newcomers," said Peterson. While Otto is averaging 14 points per game and Butler, 10.4 points and 10 rebounds, junior guard Paul Fox and sophomores Ken Hatfield and Kim Gloystein have strengthened the NWU lineup.

The Plainsmen lost last year's leading scorer Angelo Lilly due to scholastic ineligibility for the second semester and, although his absence has limited Wesleyan's noted fast-break offense, Peterson seems to have the personnel to fill the gap.

Gloystein, a 6-2 guard from York, scored 16 points against Doane, while Fox tallied 22 points in NWU's win over Dana last week.

"We have a good defense and once we pick up our field goal shooting percentage to go along with our free throw shooting we'll be tough the rest of the season," said Peterson, whose team finished third in the NIAC last season. The Plainsmen are currently 11th in the NCAA Div. III with a .715 free throw shooting mark.

Concordia's major change between losing nine games in a row and winning four of their last five including two NIAC games came in the form of junior college transfer Earl Westbrook.

Westbrook, a 6-6 forward, is averaging more than 26 points a game and as Concordia coach Rueben Stohs noted, "we haven't been out of any game since he became eligible in January."

Lester Ashby and Mike Rowan, both 6-8 freshmen, have also bolstered the Bulldog lineup.

Guards Sammy White, also a freshman and Vic Kollman along with forward Pete Koenke are averaging over nine points per game.

Rutledge's 600 series pace women bowlers

By Bob Moyer
Staff Sports Writer

Marfae Rutledge had to wait over 30 years for her first 600 series, but she only had to wait 24 hours for her next one.

As a result, Marfae dominated action among the women during the first weekend of the nine-day City Bowling Tournament, taking the lead in all events and Class A scratch and handicap singles.

Bowling at Hollywood on Saturday, Marfae opened up with 499 in doubles then shot a 610 in singles. Moving to Bowl-Mor for the team event on Sunday, she fired 600 on the nose, totaling a healthy 1709 for all events.

"It's about time I shot a 600, don't you think?" laughed Marfae. "I honestly thought I'd never shoot one. It just feels great. I'm so happy. I've been waiting years for this."

Rutledge could offer no reason for her sudden outburst.

"I'm not doing anything different. I'm still using the same old bowling ball I have been for years. I was just hitting 'em pretty good," adds Marfae.

Marfae did allow her average in two leagues at Parkway has been a little higher this year, but after shooting 499 in her doubles event, she had no inclination of what was to come.

"For singles, I moved over a little and tried to throw the ball a little straighter. The pins just started to fall," says Marfae.

LaVerne Peaks had the high women's series in the first two days of action, a 620, to lift her and Marilyn McDonald to the scratch lead in the Class A doubles with a 1109 total. Handicap leaders were Marian Hiemer and Penny Cole with 1221.

In Class B, Peggy Dunn and Janet Tenopir led the scratch doubles with 951 while Jane Carlson and Shar Thomsen's 1130 total was the best handicap score. Judy Hartman's 526 series led the scratch singles while Debbie Kennell had 603 for the best handicap score.

In the team events, Sue Teater's 560 series sparked Reynolds-Blake-Simmons to the Class A scratch lead with a 2599 total. Also on the squad were Barb Cronin, Jo Bomberger, Linda Sundberg and Laurie Kessner. Square D girls led the handicap with a total of 2777.

In Class B, Dessa Heidtbrink shot 578 on a 145 average to lift West Bair Sales to the handicap lead with 2772 and a tie for the scratch lead with Little Bo East at 2282.

Among the men, the predicted onslaught by the southpaws at Parkway became a reality when lefties Gayle Jensen and Bill Emanuel took the doubles scratch lead with 1331 and another southpaw, Ron Melichar, shot the scratch singles total with 689. Jensen had 704 in the doubles and 660 in the singles for a good 1364 total after his first six games. Melichar also shot well in doubles, totaling 621, for 1310 after two sets.

Jensen and Emanuel's total also led the handicap scores with 1379 while Rex Corter had 640-102-742 to take the singles handicap lead.

In the team events at Plaza, the Classic Five out of the Hollywood Doubles League took the scratch lead with a 3160 total.

The squad was led by Doug Christ's 683 series, tops so far among the teams and a 279 game by Paul Portische, the best game shot so far in the tourney. Portische ended up with a 664 total. Other scores from the team included Joe Peterson (628), Rodger Florom (619) and John Esquivel (566).

High handicap effort so far by the men's teams was 2814-456-3270 by ABC. A team of five seniors bowlers, who average over 70 years-of-age per man shot 3002 with their handicap. The team consists of Joe and Don Hamlow, Ike Baker, Bill Wisbey and Harry Anderson.

Watson still enjoys 'monotonous' winning

San Diego (AP) — "It's getting monotonous, but I love this kind of monotony" joyful Tom Watson said Sunday after a second consecutive, record-setting triumph, this one in the Andy Williams-San Diego Open Golf Tournament.

"I can't recall playing this well this long," said Watson, who built a six-shot lead with eight holes to play and cruised in with relaxed, confident ease and a closing three-under-par 69. "I just hope it continues."

"I was driving the ball about as well as I can possible hit it. That was the key."

"I can't harp on this enough. It was my driving. And that's where I had my problems before — I'd always hit it in the rough or in the bushes somewhere."

This time, however, he hit it so well — so long and true — the par fives were cut down to par fours. And that meant the difference. He reached three of the four par holes with two big swags, and birdied them all. In all, he played the long holes a distant 13-under-par for the week.

"I have discovered, over the last couple of weeks, it is much easier playing from the fairways than out of the trees."

Watson, who broke a tournament record by four strokes with his 14-under-par winning total in the Bing Crosby last week, took this one with a 280 total, 19 under par and under the tournament record by three shots.

The freckle-faced, red-haired, 27-year-old made this one look easy. He opened the warm, sunny final round with a two-shot lead, increased it to four at the turn, engineered a two-stroke swing in his favor on the next hole and acquired his sixth career title by a relaxed, five-shot margin.

The former British Open champion, who has played his last nine rounds in subpar figures, collected $36,000 from the total purse of $180,000, became the year's leading money-winner with $86,700 and, as a multiple title-holder, became only the third man to win his way into the World Series of Golf. Jack Nicklaus and World Cup winner Ernesto Perez Acosta of Mexico are the others.

A hole-in-one during Thursday's first round helped, but Watson built this triumph on his domination of the par-five holes. He had a string of 10 consecutive birdies on those long holes, ending on the 13th Sunday, and played them 13 under par for the week.

He also chipped in once during the week, holed it for a birdie from a bunker on the third hole Sunday and saved par from off the green on the 14th.

Those heroics made the title chase not a matter of "who?" but "by how much?" and left the national television commentators little to discuss except the fight for second place.

That ended in a tie when Larry Nelson rolled in a 12-foot birdie putt on the final hole and caught John Schroeder. They finished at 274. Schroeder with a closing 67 and Nelson with a 69.

Australian rookie Bob Shearer, who started the last round two shots back and the only man who really had a chance at catching Watson, slipped to a 73 and was tied with Jerry McGee at 275. J.C. Snead, the winner of the last two San Diego events, never really got in the chase here. He finished with a 75 and 283 total.

Watson now has finished fourth, first and first in his last three starts and has played those three tournaments a stunning 42 under par.

He opened this one with a 66, followed with rounds of 67 and 67 and wrapped it up neatly with the final 69 that included a birdie on the final hole.

The Stanford graduate in psychology, rapidly becoming one of the game's finest gate attractions, helped pull a tournament-record 29,000.

Free, McGinnis aid 76 win, 107-101

From News Wire
Lloyd Free's 33 points and George McGinnis' 31 highlighted a dazzling Philadelphia display Sunday that gave the 76ers a 107-101 victory over the Denver Nuggets in a matchup of National Basketball Association's top conference teams.

In other day games, Golden State whipped Boston 109-92, San Antonio defeated Seattle 126-118 and Milwaukee beat the New York Nets 100-92.

McGinnis was awesome inside, grabbing a game-high 12 rebounds as well as hitting from close range. Free burned the Nuggets from outside, hitting 12 of 18 shots. Julius Erving was held to a scanty eight points.

The Nuggets, losing for only the third time at home while playing before a record home crowd of 17,879 were led by Dan Issel and Bobby Jones with 26 and 25 points, respectively.

Phil Smith scored 35 points and backcourt partner Gus Williams added 20 as Golden State pulled away from Boston in the second half. The Warriors outscored the Celtics 30-16 in the decisive fourth period.

Jamaal Wilkes added 18 points, Clifford Ray had 13 and Rick Barry 12 for the Warriors. John Havlicek scored 20 points and Jo Jo White and Sidney Wicks added 14 each for the slumping Celtics, who lost their fifth game in their last six starts.

George Gervin scored 10 points in overtime en route to a season high 42 to pace San Antonio. The Sonics had rallied from an eight-point deficit in the final two minutes to tie the score 106-106 at the end of regulation play.

Swen Nater's 20 points and 18 rebounds led Milwaukee to victory over the New York Nets Nater, who played for the Nets in the American Basketball Association two years ago, helped the Bucks to only their second triumph in the last 10 games. The Nets lost their third in a row and 16th in 17 starts.

Junior Bridgeman led Milwaukee scorers with 21 points and Bob Dandridge finished with 20. Al Skinner had 20 for the Nets.

In Detroit, Marvin Barnes scored a season-high 33 points and Bob Lanier added 28 to help rally the Detroit Pistons to a 127-120 victory over the Indiana Pacers.

At Landover, Md., Phil Chenier scored 26 points and Elvin Hayes added 24 as Washington won its eighth straight game by beating Kansas City, 112-98. It was the Bullets' 14th win in their last 16 games.

Scott Wedman and Ron Boone lead KC with 17 points each.

At Portland, the Trail Blazers, minus injured center Bill Walton, rallied in the second half for a 97-91 victory over the Phoenix Suns. The triumph was Portland's 25th in 26 home games this season. Maurice Lucas led the Blazers with 21 points.

Van Berg has named Goafar, Arrividerci Daddy and Hill Whacker for Ed McEachen, and Spy Horn and Game As L for Kenneth and Helen Smith.

The last time Van Berg had a representative in the race was in 1969 when he won with Zuke's Bad Boy for his father, Marion H. Van Berg.

The list of nominees includes five stakes winners Eugene M. Conrin's Clinton Street, Kemling Brothers' Amadevil, Mo-B-Jo Stables' Wink 'T Knight, John Rohrbough's No Big Deal and Courtney Quinn et al's Likely Laughing.

Arlington parent: drinking situation out of proportion

Unfortunately, newspapers never have been nor will be exempt from making mistakes, even major ones.

Prep Panorama was a victim of one in Sunday's sports section. Mechanical problems caused deletion of one third of the column, depriving Arlington's Herman Jacob of some rather major statements.

Jacob is the father of a suspended Arlington basketball player. Last week, he chose not to join parents of other suspended players in filing suit against the Arlington School District, so the athletes could be reinstated.

Jacob said his son, Jerry, a leading scorer on the team, would not finish the basketball season because of discipline administered at home, not in the courts.

Jacob thought a season-long suspension was punishment in excess, even though he realized that attitude was in conflict with his own actions.

That part of the column made publication. What was written, but inadvertently omitted in Sunday's column, follows:

"What would Herman Jacob have done if he had been the coach?"

"Based on what happened," Jacob said, "I think the kids could have sat out some games and had to go through some extra practices and let things go at that."

Even though Jacob believes his son should be punished for violating a trust and a code of conduct, he takes his ambivalent stance for one reason.

"I think this whole thing got blown out of proportion," he said. "The facts are too far out of joint with what actually happened. 'First of all,' he explained, 'this was not a planned thing.

Those kids went over to house to eat pizza, not drink beer. "They got over there at 10:30 after a game and Jerry got home at 12:30. I know because I was still up when he got home. "It was no beer bust. Some liquor was brought in by a non-athlete and some kids were dumb enough to try it. Jerry drank one can. Some girls just had a couple tastes.

"But they were wrong and they know it," Jacob said. "They admitted their guilt, even though this is the only proof the coaching staff or anyone else has of their guilt. I guess I don't like harsh punishment for honesty."

Nevertheless, Herman Jacob feels discipline was in order for his son. Before the basketball season started, Arlington players received a set of rules from the coaching staff. Drinking, obviously, was prohibited. The athletes and their parents read the rules, signed the papers and returned it to the coaches.

No challenge of due process of law would go to change those facts. That's why Herman Jacob couldn't feel right, trying to get a temporary injunction for his son's reinstatement.

NWU grapplers face busy week

Nebraska Wesleyan will host two mat meets in Lincoln and will wrestle four teams in four days next week.

Monday, the Plainsmen dual Dana at 7 p.m. at Taylor Gym and host Northwest Missouri State and Concordia Wednesday at a 6 p.m. double-dual. On Thursday, the Plainsmen travel to Kearney State.

NWU raised its dual record to 2-1 Monday with a 28-16 win at Concordia, and competed with five wrestlers at Saturday's Dana Tournament in Blair. Bernie Wall at 134, and heavyweight Tom Edwards were the only NWU winners at Concordia, while Scott Evans, Andy Fry and Greg Lage all won by forfeit.

NWU's top individual record belongs to undefeated heavyweight Tom Edwards, who is 3-0. Other individual marks include: Greg Lage (4-1-1), Bernie Wall (4-2), Larry Coufal (1-1), Andy Fry (2-4), Jerry Anderson (1-2), Scott Evans (1-4), Dan Thomas (1-5), Jon Rystrom (0-2-1), George Riggs (0-1), Rick Norval (0-1) and Greg Blanchard (0-1).

St. Louis man wins tourney

Barry Goldstein of St. Louis, Mo., won the sixth annual Runza Open Handball Tournament Sunday by defeating Jim Faulk of Dallas, Tex., 13-21, 21-5, 21-9.

The tourney attracted more than 40 participants to the Lincoln Sports Courts. Division competitions included men's open singles, men's doubles and women's racquetball. Tom Lewis was tournament director.

Other Sunday competition saw Jim Cosentino and John Edelman of Kansas City successfully defend their doubles championship by defeating Jerry Reinecker and Chuck Harris of Kansas City, 21-16, 21-20. Chris Cox of Kansas City won her third consecutive Runza racquetball title by defeating Sue Orduna of Lincoln, 21-11, 21-15.

Two Lincolmites won consolation championships in final day action. Jan Davis won the women's racquetball consolation and Don Everett teamed with Bill Bauerly of Sioux City to win the men's doubles consolation.

Third-place winners in the three competitions were Rich Hill of Omaha in singles, Jim Beaman and Dave Wolvington of Winona, Minn., in doubles and Dee Massaglia of Kansas City in women's racquetball.

UCLA's 'fun game' topples Tennessee

Atlanta (UPI) — Sunday's nationally-televised outing against sixth-ranked Tennessee was just another basketball game as far as ninth-ranked UCLA was concerned.

But it was one of the biggest games ever for the Tennessee Vols and a touch of stage fright was apparent as the UCLA Bruins jumped into an early lead and muscled their way to a 103-89 victory.

"We approach every nonconference game as a fun game," said Bruins forward Marques Johnson, who had 16 of his 24 points in the first half when UCLA set the pace for the game.

"I thought they would be a lot tougher than they were," said UCLA sophomore guard Roy Hamilton, who paced the UCLA scoring with 30 points.

"Yeah, I thought they would be a little tougher, too," said Johnson after the Bruins picked up their 17th victory in 19 games this season. "I don't think they have much of a bench."

The Vols didn't substitute until their starters (three of them) started fouling out and appeared to tire against the obviously stronger Bruins.

"We don't ever substitute much," said Tennessee Coach Ray Mears. "We are better off substituting against a team with less talent. Our boys know that and they are prepared for it."

"I think we played kind of tired ourselves," said Johnson. "We've had a hard week. We played Southern Cal Friday night, flew to Atlanta yesterday and had to work out last night after the Hawks game."

"I think we beat an awfully good Tennessee team," said UCLA Coach Gene Barlow. "This was one of our real big games. I think depth was very definitely a factor. We felt our zone press would do something for us and it did. We gave up some layups but it was worth it."

"Their defense was very strong," said Mears. "They have got a lot of strength on the boards. UCLA played better than I have ever seen them play this season. They were stirred up more than any game we have seen them play."

In addition to scoring 30 points, Hamilton also directed the Bruins' floor play as his bigger teammates, especially Johnson and David Greenwood, dominated the inside play and enabled UCLA to become only the second

KU assistant to Missouri

Lawrence, Kan. (AP) — Carl Reese, assistant football coach at Kansas, will return to Missouri in a similar position, the Kansas City Star reported in Sunday's editions.

Reese, a 32-year-old graduate of Missouri, has been a line-backer coach at Kansas for two years but will coach the offensive backfield at Missouri, the Star said.

Wilcox wins Tri-City title

Grand Island — Lincoln's Chris Wilcox won the men's singles championship in the third annual Tri-City Racquet Club Winter Open this weekend. He defeated Dan Sloboth of Lincoln.

Phil Woog and Russell Wilste of Lincoln won by default in the doubles title match over Wilcox and Sloboth.

Jim Porter and Bill Malone of Lincoln finished second in the men's over 40 doubles and Porter was second in singles.

Mens singles — Chris Wilcox, Lincoln 15-6, 6-2. Mens doubles — Phil Woog-Russell Wilste, Lincoln by default over Chris Wilcox-Dan Sloboth, Lincoln.

Mens over 40 doubles — Ken Liddle-Wally Ryan, Offutt Air Force, Dec. 31 over Jim Porter-Bill Malone, Lincoln 4-6, 6-3. Mens singles over 40 — Wally Ryan, Offutt Air Force Base, Dec. 31 over Jim Porter, Lincoln 6-2, 6-4.

Victory stuns USF coach

Tex Winter called Northwestern's upset of Michigan "the sweetest win I've ever had in basketball in 30 years."

Guard Billy McKinney was Northwestern's big gun with 29 points and also the key man because of his ballhandling.

"Michigan is the quickest team in college basketball," said Winter. "They rely on a pressure defense. Some teams break the pressure defense but are unable to score. We broke it and did score."

Northwestern jumped ahead 45-39 at the half, built the lead to 13 at 70-57 and then withstood a comeback which brought Michigan within two.

"It was our third game on the road this week, but that had no bearing on the loss," said Michigan Coach Johnny Orr. "Give Northwestern credit. They outplayed us and out-shot us. We made a comeback, but we couldn't contain them. And McKinney was absolutely phenomenal."

Kentucky scored a big road victory over Alabama, Jack Givens' two free throws with 14 seconds remaining clinching the triumph. In the SEC race, Tennessee leads with an 8-0 mark, Kentucky is now 7-1 and Alabama is 6-2. They have played each other once, with one more meeting to go.

"To say that I am pleased is the understatement of my life," said Kentucky Coach Joe Hall. "It was just beautiful to me. We really executed well down the stretch."

Kentucky led for most of the second half, but Rickie Brown's three-point play tied it for Alabama at 83-83 with 2:02 to go. Rick Robey gave Kentucky the lead for good with two free throws with 1:51 to play, then Givens' two foul shots provided enough margin to offset a basket by Keith McCord in the closing seconds. Givens led all scorers with 23 points.

Wayne "Tree" Rollins scored 15 points, grabbed 19 rebounds and blocked eight shots as Clemson clobbered North Carolina. The Tigers led 40-34 at halftime, then shot 69 per cent from the field in the second half to pull away.

DePaul stayed with Marquette for 20 minutes, trailing just 32-29 at halftime, but the Warriors ran away with 53 points in the second half. Butch Lee led the winners with 21 and Bo Ellis had 20.

Rod Griffin shot 10-for-12 from the field, scored 28 points and hauled down eight rebounds for Wake Forest. "When the going gets tough, we like to go to Griffin," said Coach Carl Tacy and that's just what the Demon Deacons did.

Louisville romped to its 12th consecutive victory as Larry Williams tied his career high with 28 points and Wesley Cox added 22. Bob Miller's 19 points helped. Cincinnati defeat Duquesne.

Notre Dame rips Fordham

South Bend, Ind. (UPI) — Toby Knight scored 21 points and grabbed 14 rebounds Sunday to help Notre Dame to a 93-71 victory over Fordham.

The Irish broke open the game early by scoring 10 straight points, six of them by Knight, in a 3½-minute stretch midway through the first half to take a 17-6 lead.

Notre Dame, which boosted its record to 10-5, increased the margin to 44-24 at the intermission and was never pressed in the second half.

Four other Irish players scored in double figures, including freshman guard Rich Branning, who had 16 points and eight assists.

Junior forward John O'Neil paced the losing Rams, who fell to 4-14, with 21 points.

Doctors Prove You Can Help Shrink Swelling Of Hemorrhoidal Tissues Due To Inflammation. Relieve Pain And Itch Too.

Gives prompt temporary relief from hemorrhoidal pain and itch in many cases.

When inflammation, infection and swelling exist in hemorrhoidal tissues—it can be very painful for the sufferer. But there's an exclusive formula which in many cases gives hours of relief from the burning itch and pain in hemorrhoidal tissues. It also helps shrink the swelling of such tissues. Sufferers are delighted at the way it acts so gently and is so soothing to sensitive tissues.

Tests by doctors on hundreds of patients reported similar successful results in many cases. And it was all done without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or stinging, smarting astringents of any kind.

You can obtain this same medication used in these tests as any drug counter. Its name is Preparation H. Preparation H also lubricates to protect the inflamed, irritated surface area to help make bowel movements more comfortable. Be sure and try Preparation H. In ointment or suppository form.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE - Here's how to work it:

AXYDLBAAXR is LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Astrological Forecast by Sidney Omarr

Monday, January 31
When Aquarius says, "I was wrong," it usually is a production number. The earth moves. Thunder rumbles, lightning strikes. Yes, Aquarius wants to win, to be right, to be aggressive, to be on the offensive. When that time comes for the native to confess error, to apologize, the clouds separate, the sea parts, the bugs sound and one feels as if an era is beginning or coming to an end. Has your Aquarian ever backed down to you?

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Emphasis on versatility, ability to make decisions under pressure. Key now is to laugh at your own foibles, to write, express, to distribute product, to enlarge professional and personal horizons. Gemini, Sagittarius persons could figure prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Financial prospects good - if you read between the lines, study fine print and become familiar with basic material. Collect and analyze data. Consolidate - be aware of market values and fluctuations. Aquarius, Scorpio persons could figure prominently.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Lunar cycle, creative, experimental, adventure. Take initiative - express yourself. Refuse to be overshadowed by one who hardly rises above stage of mediocrity. Be confident. Make personal appearances. Get rid of "subdued" colors.

CANCER (June 21-July 21): Be discreet. You could be "let in" on backstage happenings. Hospital visit might be on agenda. You are in quest, tense places - you may be appearing on television. Family member makes diplomatic gesture. Be receptive.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22): Desire, need and requirement coming. You have to separate fact from fantasy. P. Aves, Virgo persons play key roles. Wish fulfillment, romance, ability to persuade, to win friends and influence people - these are highlighted.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on how far you go, sense of direction, relationships with subordinates. You are given more authority, responsibility, and a "little" Capricorn. Cancer persons are a little in picture. Show that you can mean business, that you are capable of lining up priorities.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides flow with journey, distance, education, spiritual revelation. You can complete an important assignment. Submit manuscript, formal, conceptual - improve methods of communication. Aries is in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make new start in new direction. Exercise greater independence of thought, action. Emphasis on mystery, tax affairs, finances affecting partner or mate. You receive aid from unexpected source. Be confident, direct - and don't be over-lyrical.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Judgment, situation could be slightly off target. Know it and take it easy - play waiting game. Refuse to be rushed into any decision, action. Defeat to partner, mate. One who taught, aided you in past is available. Ask for what you need. Don't permit bride to block progress.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Highlight service, basic material. Avoid making sensational claims. Be flexible, individual who "brags" is really suffering an identity complex. Know it and accordingly. One who shares your interests will help you over rough spot.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Emotional, tend to dominate. You feel, respond - personal magnetism is very much in evidence. Member of opposite sex programs, more than admiration. Be ready for quick changes, exciting proposals. What had been a restriction will be removed.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Personal environment is more important than usual. You're asked to decide about property, home, about costs, repairs, purchase or sale. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius could figure prominently. Change is due - know it and don't fight progress.

BIRTHDAY Jan. 20-Feb. 18: 1977: A significant month of 1977, a year which will feature greater emotional and financial security. Scorpio, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. You are dynamic, stubborn and capable of bringing down tradition and creating your own style, method. You probably were literally or psychologically uprooted from parents at a relatively early age.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to split out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 1. If the number is less than 6, add 2. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
